Cooper,2019-02-15 Writing begins with unconscious feelings of something that insistently demands to be responded to acted upon or elaborated into a new entity Writers make things that matter treaties new species software and letters to the editor as they interact with other humans of all kinds As they write they also continually remake themselves In The Animal Who Writes Cooper considers writing as a social practice and as an embodied behavior that is particularly important to human animals The author argues that writing is an act of composing enmeshed in nature cultures and is homologous with technology as a mode of making

MIND and LOVE: The Human Experience Lloyd Fell,2011-01-04 The new scientific paradigm of embodied mind or situated cognition is percolating into popular mind science but its fundamentals autopoiesis and structural coupling have never been thoroughly explained Combines the paradigm shift in biology initiated by Maturana and Varela with the recent rush of ideas in social neuroscience to create what hopes to be a refreshingly new explanation of the way our mind works in our everyday experience and reveals the most common blind spots in what we thought we knew about our mind These blind spots are spoiling our individual lives and harming our prospects for peaceful coexistence and care of our environment e g the mistaken ideas that meaning is transferable that decisions come from conscious awareness or that knowledge is a commodity The biological significance of love and the value of embracing uncertainty and respecting the unknown point to a very hopeful vision for our future This is a scientific explanation of mind leavened with process philosophy also invoking spirituality without any religious connotation

Australian Critical Decisions Ann Genovese,2018-02-02 The 1980s was a time of significant social political and cultural change In Australia law was pivotal to these changes The two High Court cases that this book explores Koowarta v Bjelke Petersen in 1982 and the Tasmanian Dams case in 1983 are famous legally as they marked a decisive reckoning by the Court with both international law and federal constitutionalism. Yet these cases also offer a significant marker of Australia in the 1980s: a shift to a different form of political engagement nationally and internationally on complex questions about race and the environment. This book brings these cases together for the first time. It does so to explore not only the legal legacy and relationship between Koowarta and Tasmanian Dams but also to reflect on how Australians experience their law in time and place and why those experiences might require more than the usual legal records. The authors include significant figures in Australian public life, some of whom were key participants in the cases, as well as established and respected scholars in law, history, Indigenous and environmental studies. The book offers a combination of personal recollections of the cases, the drama of how they were brought before the courts and decided, as well as a consideration of the cases' ongoing significance in Australian life. This book was previously published as two special issues in the Griffith Law Review.

Growing Wings on the Way Rosalind Armson, 2011-05-31 This book is about dealing with messes. Sometimes known as wicked problems, messes or messy situations are fairly easy to spot; it's hard to know where to start; we can't define them; everything seems to connect to everything else and depends on something else having been done first; we get in a muddle thinking about them; we often try to ignore some aspects of them; when we finally do something about them, they usually get worse; they're so entangled that our first mistake is usually to try and fix them as we would fix a simple problem.

Words Made Flesh Justine Bakker, David Kline, 2025-06-03 The first sustained treatment of religion and religions in the scholarship of a prominent Caribbean thinker, Sylvia Wynter, is a profoundly transdisciplinary scholar whose works span an impressive array of theory, literature, science, anthropology, philosophy, and religious studies, as well as different forms including essays, plays, a novel, and a 935-page unpublished manuscript entitled Black Metamorphosis: New Natives in a New World. Whatever the medium, Wynter frequently engages religion as a relevant category of analysis, from reflections on Christianity, Islam, and Rastafarianism to the category and role of religion as a universal aspect of human social production. Wynter's writings have received enthusiastic attention by scholars in Black studies, Caribbean theory, critical race theory, literature, and philosophy. But until recently, little scholarly writing exists that directly engages the topic of religion in her corpus. Words Made Flesh seeks to fill this gap by focusing exclusively on religion, religions, and religiosity in her work. Bringing together scholars that provide a wide variety of theoretical perspectives on religion, political theology, social theory, and science studies, this book offers an in-depth engagement with one of the most innovative and important thinkers of the last forty years and illustrates how Wynter's writing has significant implications for the study of religion and religion's relationship to colonialism, race, humanism, science, and political theology.
