The Reformation of Romance Christina Wald, 2014-08-27 This study takes a fresh look at the abundant scenarios of disguise in early modern prose fiction and suggests reading them in the light of the contemporary religious political developments More specifically it argues that Elizabethan narratives adopt aspects of the heated Eucharist debate during the Reformation including officially renounced notions like transubstantiation to negotiate culturally pressing concerns regarding identity change Drawing on the rich field of research on the adaptation of pre Reformation concerns in Anglican England the book traces a cross fertilisation between the Reformation and the literary mode of romance The study brings together topics which are currently being strongly debated in early modern studies the turn to religion a renewed interest in aesthetics and a growing engagement with prose fiction Narratives which are discussed in detail are William Baldwin's Beware the Cat Robert Greene's Pandosto and Menaphon Philip Sidney's Old and New Arcadia and Thomas Lodge's Rosalind and A Margarite of America George Gascoigne's Steele Glas John Lyly's Euphues An Anatomy of Wit and Euphues and his England Barnabe Riche's Farewell Greene's A Quip for an Upstart Courtier and Thomas Nashe's The Unfortunate Traveller

The Nature of Love Irving Singer, 1984 In this concluding volume of his impressive study of the history of Western thought about the nature of love Irving Singer reviews the principal efforts that have been made by 20th Century thinkers to analyze the phenomenon of love The bulk of the book is taken up with critical accounts of the modern thinkers who have systematically called into question the possibility itself of love as a union of distinct human selves For the most part these critiques are effectively executed and they bring a high level of critical acumen to bear on skeptical theses about love that are now too often accepted as truisms Frederick A Olafson Los Angeles Times Book Review Irving Singer has developed a method of historical analysis flexible enough to deal with all kinds of love from Greek homosexual love in Plato to the philia and agape of the New Testament to the courtly love of medieval romance to the Romantics for whom love was magic This final volume brings us to the present In The Modern World Singer offers readings of Freud Proust and Sartre among others He shows how their work was formed in reaction to the 19th century ideal of merging of the identities of lover and beloved More often than not the great modern writers portray love as impossible as a field of failure and regret This masterpiece of critical thinking is a timely eloquent and scrupulous account of what after all still makes the world go round Thomas D Evelyn Christian Science Monitor This is the third of a three volume history of the philosophy of love It begins with Kierkegaard Tolstoy and Nietzsche in the nineteenth century and treats Freud Proust Bergson D H Lawrence G B Shaw Santayana Sartre and others in the twentieth Although the author's approach is primarily historical he intersperses critical remarks throughout Most of the major themes which are discussed by philosophers of love make their way into this history including friendship sexual love and the distinction between love that is based on the value of the beloved and love that bestows value on the beloved Singer devotes a number of pages to his own views on falling in love being in love and staying in love Singer's exposition is lucid and organized his criticisms are insightful Ethics In this third volume of historical overview of the development of the Western conception of love Singer uses writers philosophers and psychologists to provide the reader with an overview of love in the late 19th and 20th century Analyzing authors such as Tolstoy Proust D H Lawrence and Shaw and philosophers such as Nietzsche Kierkegaard Sartre and Santayana as well as Freud Singer links each contributor's thoughts to the influence of previous writers and also provides some psycho-historical insight into their personal lives that might have been either a source or direct result of their views In this final volume Singer proceeds to look at not just the great men influence but also provides a chapter overviewing scientific contributions to our understanding of love Singer's work is a significant contribution to understanding the social construction of important abstract social and personal values By tracing love through different historical periods through a variety of voices Singer has created a rich history of the struggle between the ideal and the real between the dreams of what love should provide and the reality of what relationships have been in each historical period By personalizing the voice through psychohistorical analysis Singer also provides insight into the shaping of ideas through the intimate struggles of the shapers Mark V Chaffee Contemporary Psychology

The Nature of Love, Volume 3 Irving Singer, 2009-02-27 The final volume of Singer's trilogy discusses ideas about love in the work of writers ranging from Kierkegaard Nietzsche and Tolstoy to Freud Proust D H Lawrence Shaw and others in the contemporary world Irving Singer's trilogy The Nature of Love has been called majestic New York Times Book Review monumental Boston Globe one of the major works of philosophy in our century Nous wise and magisterial Times Literary Supplement and a masterpiece of critical thinking that is a timely eloquent and scrupulous account of what after all still makes the world go round Christian Science Monitor In the third volume Singer examines the pervasive dialectic between optimistic idealism and pessimistic realism in modern thinking about the nature of love He begins by discussing anti-Romantic Romantics focusing on Kierkegaard Nietzsche and Tolstoy influential nineteenth century thinkers whose views illustrate much of the ambiguity and self-contradiction that permeate thinking about love in the last hundred years He offers detailed studies of Freud Proust Shaw D H Lawrence and Santayana and he maps the ideas about love in Continental existentialism particularly those of Sartre and de Beauvoir Singer finally envisages a future of cooperation between pluralistic humanists and empirical scientists This last volume of Singer's trilogy does not pretend to offer the final word on the subject any more than do most of the philosophers he discusses but his masterful work can take its place beside their earlier investigations into these vast and complex questions
