Health In England 1998:

Medicine and Magic in Elizabethan London Lauren Kassell, 2007-02-01 Simon Forman 1552-1611 is one of London's most infamous astrologers. He stood apart from the medical elite because he was not formally educated and because he represented and boldly asserted medical ideas that were antithetical to those held by most learned physicians. He survived the plague, was consulted thousands of times a year for medical and other questions, distilled strong waters made from beer, herbs, and sometimes chemical ingredients, pursued the philosopher's stone in experiments and ancient texts, and when he was fortunate spoke with angels. He wrote compulsively, documenting his life and protesting his expertise in thousands of pages of notes and treatises. This highly readable book provides the first full account of Forman's papers, makes sense of his notorious reputation, and vividly recovers the world of medicine and magic in Elizabethan London. Social Inequalities and the Distribution of the Common Mental Disorders Tom Fryers, Rachel Jenkins, David Melzer, 2004-04-28 Social inequalities are established features of the distribution of physical disease in the UK and many other developed countries. In most physical diseases, a clear trend of poorer health is evident with each step down the hierarchy of social position. By contrast, the nature of the links between social position and mental illness in the general population has appeared less clear. This lack of clarity is problematic as mental disorders are major causes of disability, especially in adults of working age. Social Inequalities and the Distribution of the Common Mental Disorders presents in depth and up-to-date research looking at the links between social position, ethnicity, and mental health. Its findings will have implications for mental health professionals and policy makers.

Access to Health Care Martin Gulliford, Myfanwy Morgan, 2013-05-13 To what extent can we have truly universal, comprehensive, and timely health services equally available to all? Access to Health Care considers the meaning of access in health care and examines the theoretical issues that underpin these questions. Contributors draw on a range of disciplinary perspectives to investigate key aspects of access, including geographical accessibility of services, socio-economic equity of access, patients' help-seeking behaviour, organisational problems, and access methods for evaluating access. Access is considered in both a UK and international context. The book includes chapters on contrasting health policies in the United States and European Union. Access to Health Care provides both health care researchers as well as health professionals, managers, and policy analysts with a clear and wide-ranging overview of topical and controversial questions in health policy and health services organization and delivery. Biomedical Research Council of Europe, 2004-01-01 This publication, the fifth in the Ethical Eye series, contains contributions from a multidisciplinary group of authors from different countries in Europe which examine a range of ethical issues arising from the use of biomedical research. Topics discussed include the problems of obtaining consent, standards for the selection and recruitment of participants for research, the use of placebos in clinical trials of new medicines or experimental treatments for cancer sufferers, industry-sponsored clinical trials, the internationalisation of medical research, and gender aspects. The publication looks at various international and European standards governing this field including the Helsinki Declaration of the World Medical Association EU Directive 2001/20 on pharmaceutical research and the Council of Europe's Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine

Policy Responses To Social Exclusion Janie Percy-Smith, 2000-09-16 This timely book examines current policy responses to social exclusion. It begins by asking the questions: what do we mean by social exclusion? What are the dimensions of social exclusion? How is it measured and what are the common threads that run through contemporary policy? Each contribution addresses a different area of policy, describing the context for the intervention, examining key themes and issues, and assessing the likely effectiveness of policies. The final chapter asks the question: how should we assess the impact of policy to address social exclusion and then provides a possible framework for evaluation. Policy Responses to Social Exclusion is recommended reading for advanced undergraduates and postgraduates on social policy, social administration and public policy courses. It will also be of interest to a wide range of policy makers and practitioners in local government, central government and voluntary agencies involved in developing and implementing policy responses to social exclusion.

The Health Promoting School Susan Denman, Alysoun Moon, Carl Parsons, David Stears, 2003-09-02 Under the UK Labour Government 1997-2001, there have been clear signs of a willingness to revive the pastoral curriculum in schools and to develop stronger links between the health and education sectors. This book, based on empirical work undertaken in England and throughout Europe, explores such government policy and, in particular, the development of the health promoting school. The authors provide a detailed examination of the health promoting school movement in Europe, including application of concepts, policies, research and practice to the National Healthy Schools Standards in England. A whole school approach to the promotion of health, well-being and educational achievement is taken throughout the book. This approach includes analysis of such subjects and issues as personal, social and health education, citizenship, environmental education, democracy, self-esteem, social capital and empowerment. The Health Promoting School: Policy, Research and Practice is a timely publication that will serve to inform the practice of teachers in schools and higher education, school management, student teachers and health professionals, health promotion and public health specialists.
