Abstract. The aim of the study was to find out how teachers and project actors experienced the implementation of the specialisation education in a digital learning environment. The methods were triangulation with paired t-test, ANOVA and content analysis of qualitative data. The results showed a statistical difference between the responses after the first and second implementation of specialisation education. The overall results show that teachers and project actors demonstrate a strong commitment to producing and developing student-centred and work-life-centred online specialisation education.

1 Background

The constant changes of the social and health sector require teachers to update and specialise their competences. The rise of digital learning environments offers a unique opportunity to expand teaching methods and support teachers' multidisciplinary specialisation [1].

Social and health care is a field where rapid technological developments and changing practices pose constant challenges for teachers. Providing multidisciplinary specialisation education is one way of meeting this challenge, and digital learning environments offer an effective means of supporting such training [2]. Digitalisation enables diversification of teaching, increased flexibility, and different ways of engaging students. The digital learning environment opens new opportunities for multidisciplinary specialisation studies. It allows students to participate at any time and from any place, making it easier to combine work and study [3].
