The Practices of Painting in Japan, 1475-1500 Quitman E. Phillips, 2000 This book attempts to expand the grounds and methodology of studying Japanese art history by focusing on the conditions procedures events and social interplay that characterized the production of paintings in late fifteenth century Japan Though the book's ultimate concerns are art historical its analysis also draws heavily from the insights of sociology and social history At its core is a fresh examination of the major primary documents of the period in an attempt to liberate the study from assumptions long embedded in the historiography of late medieval Japanese painting history Early chapters describe documents methods basic sites and conditions of painting before turning to the main contribution of the book painting considered as a body of social practices The production of painting in the late fifteenth century was profoundly social dynamically related to the circumstances of its agents Painters advisors assistants clients and others did not exert themselves simply to bring paintings into existence They sought advantages such as wealth and prestige met obligations and satisfied the demands of custom Surviving documents from the period present rich evidence of the involvement of such persons in the imperial court the Ashikaya Gozan community the great temples of Nara and the halls of local lords The author takes into account the patterns of expectation that existed at the various sites but does not construe them as static and mechanically determined Rather he shows that expectations evolved in response to changed conditions Although this study specifically addresses the last quarter of the fifteenth century it can aid future research in Japanese painting practice in other eras by serving as a model of how new interpretations can emerge from close documentary investigation the making Beginning in the late eighteenth century huge circular panoramas presented their audiences with resplendent representations that ranged from historic battles to exotic locations Such panoramas were immersive but static There were other panoramas that moved hundreds and probably thousands of them Their history has been largely forgotten In Illusions in Motion Erkki Huhtamo excavates this neglected early manifestation of media culture in the making The moving panorama was a long painting that unscrolled behind a window by means of a mechanical cranking system accompanied by a lecture music and sometimes sound and light effects Showmen exhibited such panoramas in venues that ranged from opera houses to church halls creating a market for mediated realities in both city and country In the first history of this phenomenon Huhtamo analyzes the moving panorama in all its complexity investigating its relationship to other media and its role in the culture of its time In his telling the panorama becomes a window for observing media in operation Huhtamo explores such topics as cultural forms that anticipated the moving panorama theatrical panoramas the diorama the panoramania of the 1850s and the career of Albert Smith the most successful showman of that era competition with magic lantern shows the final flowering of the panorama in the late nineteenth century and the panorama's afterlife as a topos traced through its evocation in literature journalism science philosophy and propaganda Library of Congress Subject Headings Library of Congress.
