Killick,1991 Aid to Sub Saharan Africa has been less effective in promoting economic development than has aid to other regions Policies in the recipient countries of Africa though certainly not the only factor play the most important role in determining aid s effectiveness At the heart of the problem is politics and the solution rests in the hands of the people of Africa The Moral Economy of EU Association with Africa Mark Langan,2015-08-27 Africa s association with the European Union has long been hailed as a progressive model of North South relations European officials in particular have represented the Africa EU partnership as a pro poor enterprise in which trade interests are married to development prerogatives Applying a moral economy perspective this book examines the tangible impact of Africa Europe trade and development co operation on citizens in developing countries In so doing it challenges liberal accounts of Europe s normative power to enable benevolent change in the Global South and illuminates how EU discourse acts to legitimise unequal trade ties that have regressive consequences for the poor Drawing upon the author s own fieldwork it assesses the difference between norms and the actual impact of EU concessions in relation to budget support aid for trade private sector development PSD decent work It concludes by considering the value of a moral economy approach in the assessment of free trade structures more widely This text will be of key interest to scholars and students of Africanist IPE European studies and more broadly international political economy international development and international relations IMF Survey

International Monetary Fund,1996 Adjustment in Africa World Bank,1994 This the second title in the World Bank

Policy Research Reports the first was the headline making The East Asian Miracle discusses the economic situation in Africa as it has evolved over the past several decades To reverse the economic decline that began in the 1970s many sub Saharan African countries have undertaken efforts to restructure their economies This has included liberalizing trade deregulating markets and prices privatizing public enterprises and strengthening management of the financial and public sectors Implementation has been uneven in different countries and even those countries that have attempted major reforms have not achieved policies that are considered sound by international standards A key finding is that improving policies paid off in higher GDR and sectoral growth rates which are vital to reducing poverty but in countries where policies deteriorated economic performance worsened The report also shows that despite the importance of reforming economic policies countries need to invest more in human capital and infrastructure expand their institutional capacity and develop better governance
