

Tertiary Eye Care Centre Model for Development of Paediatric Cataract Surgery Services in Developing Countries

Shrestha UD

ABSTRACT

It is estimated that every minute a child becomes bilaterally blind in developing nations. Paediatric cataract blindness presents an enormous problem to developing countries in terms of the human social burden, economic loss, and morbidity. The management of the paediatric cataract is lens aspiration with intra ocular lens implantation with anterior vitrectomy. The surgery should be performed by paediatric ophthalmologist in tertiary eye care centres. Facilities of general anaesthesia should be available in these centres and the operating theatres should be well-equipped with vitrectomy machine, biometry and portable keratometer.

Keywords: Blindness, paediatric cataract, tertiary eye care centre

Of the 1.5 million blind children in the world, 1.3 million live in Asia and Africa, and 75% of all the causes of this blindness are preventable or curable. The prevalence of blindness varies according to the socioeconomic development of the country and the under-five mortality rate. In developing countries the rate of blindness can be as high as 1.5 per 1000 population. Compared to industrialised countries, this figure is 10 times higher.¹ About 0.5 million children become blind each year.² For those who survive childhood, the burden of disability in terms of "blind years" is huge. The child who goes blind today is likely to remain so till 2050.³

The avoidable causes of childhood blindness according to Vision 2020 are corneal scarring, refractive error, congenital cataract, congenital glaucoma and retinopathy of prematurity. Accounting for 8% to 39% of all cases, cataract is one of the most treatable causes of blindness in children.⁴ The prevalence of blindness from cataracts in children of developing countries is probably one to four per 10,000 compared with approximately less than one per 10,000 children in the industrialized world.⁵

Managing cataracts in children remains a challenge as treatment is often difficult, tedious, and requires a dedicated team effort. To assure the best long term outcome for cataract blind children, appropriate paediatric surgical techniques need to be defined and adopted by ophthalmic surgeons of developing countries. The high cost of operative equipment and the uneven distribution of ophthalmologists and anaesthetists create unique challenges.⁶ The future of any society are children. Hence the management of paediatric cataract blindness needs to be addressed in developing countries like Nepal. This will help to achieve one of the goals of Vision 2020.

Most of the eye hospitals in Nepal are competent to provide high quality eye services. An adult can undergo cataract surgery at the nearest eye hospitals or in microsurgical eye camps. However, in case of paediatric cataract, this is not always practical. Parents and

Primary Eye Care in Pan America: a Program Developed by the Pan American Health Organization and Help the World See Wayne Cannon, Juan Carlos Silva, 1994 The number of people in the world who need eyeglasses is well studied and predictable approximately one of every two persons needs this care In developed countries most who need eyeglasses can get them the reverse is true in developing countries It is generally seen that only 10 to 15 percent of the people in developing countries receive basic eye care Beyond the basic need for eyeglasses is the problem of blindness More that 40 million are blind As many as 40 percent of these cases could have been prevented with early detection and appropriate treatment While eye care is available everywhere in most developing countries the cost is extremely high when compared to the average income Additionally there are not enough practitioners available to serve the population Governments are aware of this shortfall However there are limited resources and many competing needs with higher priority Help The World See is a non profit corporation whose purpose is to provide primary eye care in developing countries Help The World See has developed an approach to resolving the problem of shortage of primary eye care The concept is to establish a managed fee for service primary low cost system within developing countries The system will provide primary eye care at a very low cost compared to existing systems Each new system will be economically self sustaining and will require no subsidy from the government or any other organization

Routledge Handbook of Entrepreneurship in Developing Economies Colin C. Williams, Anjula Gurtoo, 2016-07-22 The Routledge Handbook of Entrepreneurship in Developing Economies is a landmark volume that offers a uniquely comprehensive overview of entrepreneurship in developing countries. Addressing the multi-faceted nature of entrepreneurship, chapters explore a vast range of subject areas including education, economic policy, gender, and the prevalence and nature of informal sector entrepreneurship. In order to understand the process of new venture creation in developing economies, what it means to be engaged in entrepreneurship in a developing world context must be addressed. This handbook does so by exploring the difficulties, risks, and rewards associated with being an entrepreneur and evaluates the impacts of the environment, relationships, performance, and policy dynamics on small and entrepreneurial firms in developing economies. The handbook brings together a unique collection of over forty international researchers who are all actively engaged in studying entrepreneurship in a developing world context. The chapters offer concise but detailed perspectives and explanations on key aspects of the subject across a diverse array of developing economies spanning Africa, Asia, Latin America, and Eastern Europe. In doing so, the chapters highlight the heterogeneity of entrepreneurship in developed economies and contribute to the on-going policy discourses for managing and promoting entrepreneurial growth in the developing world. The book will be of great interest to scholars, students, and policymakers in the areas of development economics, business, and management, public policy, and development studies.

Noncommunicable Diseases in the Developing World Louis Galambos, Jeffrey L. Sturchio, Rachel Calvin Whitehead, 2014. Presents a pragmatic agenda for achieving effective and sustainable global action on noncommunicable diseases in lower and middle income countries. Noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) including cardiovascular disease, diabetes, asthma, and other chronic respiratory conditions, and cancers are the leading causes of death worldwide. An estimated 36 million people die from such diseases each year; this represents roughly two out of three deaths globally. Eighty percent of these fatalities occur in developing countries. The statistics are staggering, yet millions of these deaths are preventable. This is an urgent global health issue that demands analysis of gaps in NCD research, new policies and practices, and actionable recommendations to close the gaps. The Johns Hopkins Institute for Applied Economics, Global Health, and the Study of Business Enterprise convened an NCD Working Group of leading scholars to examine a wide range of issues that both the private and public sectors must address to make sustainable progress in NCD prevention and treatment in lower and middle income countries. Collected in this volume are essays on five key areas where strengthened policies and health systems can have the most impact in the near future: Accelerating regulatory harmonization, Structuring supply chains, Improving access to interventions, Restructuring primary care, Promoting multisectoral and intersectoral action. While there is a growing literature on the problem of NCDs, none of the available studies provides background on the range of challenges matched with specific steps that can be taken by the public sector, private sector, and civil society working together. Noncommunicable Diseases in the Developing World presents a framework for understanding the salience of specific policy recommendations and detailed steps that can be taken now to move forward in the global campaign against NCDs.
