Fashion And Artistic Dressing:

Fashion and Artistic Dressing Hamza Simrick, 2005-07-13 Fashion denotes artistic dressing and it is a product of the sewing trade considered important to the public. However, if the general perception of the sewing trade had been viewed with a little more respect, the trade wouldn't be on its deathbed today. The public must understand that manufacturers alone can't meet their thirst for elegance; there must be technicians outside the manufacturing arena to service the clothes before they wear them. No matter what, if you have acquired some social and fashion values at some point during the life of a garment, you must consult with a garment technician. But people are unwilling to respond to the importance of the trade and compensate those who help them look their best in life. Western dressers will feel the disappearance of bespoke custom tailors and dressmakers who were known for their exceptional talents, and especially now with the increased demand for fashionable clothes. The public must read and learn about fashion and clothes, not just look at photos of glamorous people or read articles usually written by good writers but without substance, but read articles to acquire knowledge about clothes and properly wearing those that depict fashion and artistic dressing. This book provides the knowledge and was written for that purpose. This perception stigmatized the sewing trade as the trade of the dropouts and thus caused the younger generation to turn away from learning the trade. With the same breath, they can restore the artistic talent through a concerted effort of the authorities, the fashion schools, and the manufacturers before the art disappears completely. Since both men and women have acquired a desire and taste for fashion dressing, it is a sign that indicates a willingness to respect the trade and to place it in its proper perspective in order to protect the quality of fashion. What would we do without clothes? It's a fact that no one ever leaves home unless he or she is dressed with good taste. But clothes by themselves are no more than just pieces of fabric sewn together unless a person wears them as a garment properly. It is important that you respect clothes because they make a statement on your behalf; they give you confidence at work among your friends in social settings in public, and above all, they play the most important part in your life after food. Clothes are the epitome of fashion and are the product of the sewing industry, which must be preserved.

Clothing Art Aileen Ribeiro, 2008 An entirely new way of looking at the history of fashion through the eyes of artists. There have always been important links between art and clothing. Artists have documented the ever-evolving trends in fashion, popularized certain styles of dress, and at times even designed fashions. This is the first book to explore in depth the fascinating points of contact between art and clothing, and in doing so, it constructs a new and innovative history of dress in which the artist plays a central role. Aileen Ribeiro provides an illuminating account of the relationship between artists and clothing from the 17th century, when a more complex and sophisticated attitude to dress first appeared, to the early 20th century, when the boundaries between art and fashion became more fluid. Haute couture could be seen as art, and art used textiles and clothes in highly imaginative ways. Her narrative encompasses such themes as the ways in which clothing has helped to define the nation state, how masquerade and dressing up were key subjects in art, and life and how while many artists found increasing inspiration in high fashion others became involved in designing artistic and reform dress Sumptuously illustrated Clothing Art also delves into the ways in which artists represent the clothes they depict in their work approaches which range from photographic detail through varying degrees of imaginative reality to generalized drapery
