Christopher Hatton Turnor,1865      Telicity and Durativity Andrea Luise Wilhelm,2007-01-22 This book studies the linguistic representation of events by examining the relevance of two salient event characteristics telicity and durativity to the grammatical system of natural language The study of events and of event characteristics is an important testing ground for theories on the boundary between extralinguistic and linguistic knowledge and on the relation between semantics and syntax Telicity and durativity are notions which have become increasingly influential in both the semantic and the syntactic i e grammaticalized representation of events The book furthers the understanding of events through the comparison of two genetically and typologically distinct languages German and D ne Sulin Chipewyan Athapaskan an indigenous language of Northwestern Canada It contains the first in depth documentation of the aspectual system of D ne Sulin and a careful analysis of the aspectual behaviour of German particle verbs A stringent methodology considers semantic pragmatic and grammatical factors in both languages The data reveal that telicity and durativity belong to profoundly different semantic and grammatical domains and that neither notion is grammaticalized universally While both notions are represented semantically in German as well as in D ne Sulin telicity is grammaticalized only in the former and durativity is grammaticalized only in the latter      The Dawn of Fluid Dynamics Michael Eckert,2007-06-27 This is the first publication to describe the evolution of fluid dynamics as a major field in modern science and engineering It contains a description of the interaction between applied research and application taking as its example the history of fluid mechanics in the 20th century
