Harris, 2005-05-19 In Of Liberty and Necessity James A Harris presents the first comprehensive account of the free will problem in eighteenth century British philosophy Harris proposes new interpretations of the positions of familiar figures such as Locke Hume Edwards and Reid He also gives careful attention to writers such as William King Samuel Clarke Anthony Collins Lord Kames James Beattie David Hartley Joseph Priestley and Dugald Stewart who while well known in the eighteenth century have since been largely ignored by historians of philosophy Through detailed textual analysis and by making precise use of a variety of different contexts Harris elucidates the contribution that each of these writers makes to the eighteenth century discussion of the will and its freedom In this period the question of the nature of human freedom is posed principally in terms of the influence of motives upon the will On one side of the debate are those who believe that we are free in our choices A motive these philosophers believe constitutes a reason to act in a particular way but it is up to us which motive we act upon On the other side of the debate are those who believe that on the contrary there is no such thing as freedom of choice According to these philosophers one motive is always intrinsically stronger than the rest and so is the one that must determine choice Several important issues are raised as this disagreement is explored and developed including the nature of motives the value of indifference to the will's freedom the distinction between moral and physical necessity the relation between the will and the understanding and the internal coherence of the concept of freedom of will One of Harris's primary objectives is to place this debate in the context of the eighteenth century concern with replicating in the mental sphere what Newton had achieved in the philosophy of nature All of the philosophers discussed in Of Liberty and Necessity conceive of themselves as experimental reasoners and when examining the will focus primarily upon what experience reveals about the influence of motives upon choice The nature and significance of introspection is therefore at the very centre of the free will problem in this period as is the question of what can legitimately be inferred from observable regularities in human behaviour
