Structural Change in Transportation and Communications in the Knowledge Society Kiyoshi Kobayashi, T. R. Lakshmanan, William Peter Anderson, 2006-12-21 The transformation of the world economy from a system of nations trading materials intensive goods to a system of seamless global networks for information intensive goods and services has created the need for a comprehensive restructuring of transportation and communications activities. The contributors, transportation and communications analysts from Japan and the United States, address this restructuring from a variety of perspectives ranging from theoretical treatments of the role of information in the economy to applications of communications technologies for the collection of travel data. The authors transcend traditional methods of transportation and communication analysis in order to address emerging issues that are not well represented by the prevailing cost-benefit framework. Many draw from advances in social sciences such as game theory that recognize the interdependence of human decision making. New ways of assessing the economic benefit of infrastructure and the evolving role of institutions in the information economy are demonstrated along with novel approaches to analyzing human mobility and interaction in a knowledge-rich environment. By moving beyond traditional forms of analysis that were better suited to an earlier time, the chapters in this book provide a wealth of insights for policy formulation in the globalized knowledge economy. This comprehensive volume will be of great value to regional scientists and economic geographers as well as civil engineers, economists, and analysts interested in transportation and communications.

The Polycentric Metropolis Peter Hall, Kathy Pain, 2012-06-25 A new 21st century urban phenomenon is emerging: the networked polycentric mega-city region. Developed around one or more cities of global status, it is characterized by a cluster of cities and towns, physically separate but intensively networked in a complex spatial division of labour. This book describes and analyses eight such regions in North West Europe. For the first time, this work shows how businesses interrelate and communicate in geographical space within each region, between them, and with the wider world. It goes on to demonstrate the profound consequences for spatial planning and regional development in Europe, and by implication, other similar urban regions of the world. The Polycentric Metropolis introduces the concept of a mega-city region, analyses its characteristics, examines the issues surrounding regional identities, and discusses policy ramifications and outcomes for infrastructure, transport systems, and regulation. Packed with high quality maps, case study data, and written in a clear style by highly experienced authors, this will be an insightful and significant analysis suitable for professionals in urban planning and policy, environmental consultancies, business and investment communities, technical libraries, and students in urban studies, geography, economics, and town spatial planning.
