Rethinking Disability Patrick Devlieger, Beatriz Miranda-Galarza, Steven E. Brown, Megan Strickfaden, 2016-06-15 The act of life is a lived experience common and unique that ties each of us to every other lived experience The fact of disability does not alter this fundamental truth In this edition of Rethinking Disability World Perspectives in Culture and Society we are presented with a system of thinking that considers the values of disability as a resource as a creative source of culture that moves disability out of the realm of victimized people and insurmountable barriers and provides opportunities to use the experience of disability to enter into networks that recognize strengths of differing abilities The authors within will intrigue you will move you will charm you but always will challenge your notion of sameness and difference as they confront the construct and de construct of disability and ableism They present compelling arguments for viewing disABILITY through the multiple lenses of disability culture They explore themes and issues that transcend past and origins time and place nuances of genetics to experiences of present and becoming and towards the future and beyond mere human yet always intrinsically connected to being human This book is intended for all audiences who dare to confront difference and sameness within themselves and in connection with others to inspire researchers who wish to explore and examine disability across social cultural and economic barriers It is an invitation to push away the barriers bring ableism inside to a place where the prosthesis is no longer the elephant in the room The Bookman, 1911

Emotion, Truth and Meaning C. Wilks, 2013-03-14 The aim of this book is to defend the Emotive Theory of Ethics and in particular the versions of that theory proposed by A J Ayer in Language Truth and Logic 1936 and by C L Stevenson in Ethics and Language 1944 For those readers who are familiar with the conventional history of Twentieth Century moral philosophy and the infamous place which the Emotive Theory occupies in that history the question which may well spring to mind at this point is Why bother In order to answer this question however I will need to provide a rough sketch of the very unconventional history of Twentieth Century moral philosophy which inspired me to resurrect a theory which most modern moral philosophers have long assumed to be safely dead and buried From the very outset the Emotive Theory ET was a misunderstood misrepresented and unjustly ridiculed theory but contrary to what one might expect it has with the passing of time become an even more misunderstood misrepresented and unjustly ridiculed theory Commanding Right and Forbidding Wrong in Islamic Thought Michael Cook, 2001-01-25 What kind of duty do we have to try to stop other people doing wrong The question is intelligible in just about any culture but few of them seek to answer it in a rigorous fashion The most striking exception is found in the Islamic tradition where commanding right and forbidding wrong is a central moral tenet already mentioned in the Koran As an historian of Islam whose research has ranged widely over space and time Michael Cook is well placed to interpret this complex subject His book represents the first sustained attempt to map the history of Islamic reflection on this obligation It covers the origins of Muslim thinking about forbidding wrong the relevant doctrinal developments over the centuries and its significance in Sunni and Shi ite thought today In this way the book contributes to the understanding of Islamic thought its relevance to contemporary Islamic politics and ideology and raises fundamental questions for the comparative study of ethics
