, Science and Technology Policy F. Tisdell,2012-12-06 I was asked recently to prepare an independent background report on the subject of priority assessment in science and technology policy for the Australian Science and Technology Council The Council while not necessarily endorsing this book suggested that a wider audience could be interested in the type of material contained in my report and kindly gave me permission to publish the material in my own right The present book contains this and other material some of which was presented at a seminar on National Science Policy Implications for Government Departments arranged by the Department of Science and the Environment Additional ideas were developed in response to comments on the manuscript by referees as a result of discussions with Professor John Metcalfe and Dr Peter Stubbs of Manchester University a conversation with Dr Keith Hartley of the University of York and in the wake of a communication from Dr Ken Tucker Assistant Director Bureau of Industry Economics Australia Science and technology policy affects and concerns everyone of us if for no other reason than we cannot escape in this interdependent world from the economic social and environmental overs pills generated by science and technology We must face the problems and promises inherent in new and existing science and technology whether we like it or not Not surprisingly this book finds that all industrialized countries seem to be facing similar economic and social problems Science and Technology Parks and Regional Economic Development Sara Amoroso,Albert N. The Dynamics of Science and Technology W. Krohn, E.T. Layton Jr., P. Weingart, 1978-05-31 The interrelations of science and technology as an object of study seem to have drawn the attention of a number of disciplines the history of both science and technology sociology economics and economic history and even the philosophy of science The question that comes to mind is whether the phenomenon itself is new or if advances in the disciplines involved account for this novel interest or in fact if both are interconnected When the editors set out to plan this volume their more or less explicit conviction was that the relationship of science and technology did reveal a new configuration and that the disciplines concerned with ITS analysis failed at least in part to deal with the change because of conceptual and methodological preconceptions To say this does not imply a verdict on the insufficiency of one and the superiority of any other one disciplinary approach Rather the situation is much more complex In economics for example the interest in the relationship between science and technology is deeply influenced by the theoretical problem of accounting for the factors of economic growth The primary concern is with technology and the problem is whether the market induces technological advances or whether they induce new demands that explain the subsequent diffusion of new technologies Science is generally considered to be an exogenous factor not directly subject to market forces and therefore appears to be of no interest
