Summary Measures of Population Health World Health Organization, 2002 As life expectancy rates continue to increase in many countries around the world, comparative health assessments based on mortality rates alone give an increasingly inadequate picture of public health. This publication addresses a wide range of key issues regarding the measurement of population health using comprehensive indices which combine data on mortality and ill health. It considers the various uses of such summary measures as well as an appropriate measurement framework and specific ethical and social value choices involved. The contributors to this book include leading experts in epidemiological methods, ethics, health economics, health status measurement, and the valuation of health states.

Short and Long Term Effects of Breast Feeding on Child Health Berthold Koletzko, Kim Fleischer Michaelsen, Olle Hernell, 2006-04-11 Proceedings of the 9th International Conference of the International Society for Research in Human Milk and Lactation (ISRHML) October 2-6, 1999, Bavaria, Germany. The quality of infant feeding is of major importance for child health development and well-being, and breast feeding is the natural form of supplying food to the infant and is considered to be ideally adapted to the needs of both mother and child. This contributed volume therefore brings together the research on the physiological foundations and on the biological effects of breast feeding, both short and long term. This book contains the work of scientists from over thirty countries, many of whom are leading researchers in their fields, and details papers presented by the invited speakers of the conference and short summaries of presentations of original research results.

Social Determinants of Women's Health in Low and Middle Income Countries Rubeena Zakar, Parveen Ali, Gaurang Baxi, Sarosh Iqbal, 2024-11-11 It is well established that the social determinants of health (SDH) highly influence health outcomes and inequities. This is particularly true in low and middle income countries where women are deprived of their basic rights, including access to health services, appropriate nutrition, and education. Socio-cultural practices such as child marriages, forced marriages, cousin marriages, female genital mutilation, and son preference undermine women's health and well-being. Additionally, various negative stereotypes such as pregnancy and childbirth-related taboos, dowry and honor-related violence, restrictions on women's mobility, and social participation are significantly associated with women's health status. To improve women's sexual and reproductive health, societies must take comprehensive and integrated measures to address these cultural stereotypes and harmful sociocultural practices against women A SDH approach dictates that health is shaped importantly by various individual factors and community norms that further enable or constrain health Individual factors include education income ethnicity and the environment wherein people live including their families communities and workplace Macro level social factors include the labor market schools healthcare systems legal systems institutionalized practices and ideologies In many low and middle income countries women are still socially excluded and economically marginalized They lack opportunities for education economic growth and political participation There are many social drivers associated with maternal health Many negative life experiences such as infertility and perinatal loss poverty discrimination social inequalities lack of autonomy violence economic dependency and isolation have long lasting impact on mothers mental health and wellbeing To comprehensively understand the drive of maternal health a multilevel and bio social approach of social determinants of women s health is integral
