Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 1985-1990 ,1993 Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States, 2005 ,2007 Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States, 2006 ,2007 Also available via the World Wide Web Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States, 1996 United States. Energy Information Administration,1997 Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 2003 United States. Department of Energy,1996 Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 1998 , Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 2002 , Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States, 1985--1990 ,2005 The Earth s capacity to support life depends on the moderating influences of gases that envelop the planet and warm its surface and protect it from harmful radiation These gases are referred to as greenhouse gases Their warming capacity called the greenhouse effect is essential to maintaining a climate hospitable to all plant animal and human life In recent years however there has been increasing concern that human activity may be affecting the intricate balance between the Earth s absorption of heat from the sun and its capacity to reradiate excess heat back into space Emissions of greenhouse gases from human activities may be an important mechanism that affects global climate Thus research is intensifying to improve our understanding of the role human activities might play in influencing atmospheric concentrations of greenhouse gases On the basis of scientific findings of the past few decades the US Government and the international community at large are now taking steps toward stabilizing greenhouse gas emissions This report contributes to that process Mandated by Congress this report provides estimates of US emissions of the principal greenhouse gases carbon dioxide methane nitrous oxide chlorofluorocarbons carbon monoxide nitrogen oxides and nonmethane volatile organic compounds Estimates are for the period 1985 to 1990 Preliminary estimates for 1991 have also been included whenever data were available Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 2004 ,2005 Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 2001 , Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 1999 , Emissions of Greenhouse Gases in the United States 2000 , Greenhouse Gas Emission Inventories Barbara V. Braatz,B.P. Jallow,S. Molnár,D. Murdiyarso,M. Perdomo,John F. Fitzgerald,2013-03-09 International concern for the continued growth of greenhouse gas emissions and the potentially damaging consequences of resultant global climate change led to the signing of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change by 155 nations at the Earth Summit in June 1992 The Convention came into force on 21 March 1994 three months after receiving its 50th ratification All Parties to the Convention are required to compile periodically update and publish national inventories of anthropogenic greenhouse gas emissions and sinks using comparable methodologies In support of this process the US Country Studies Program US CSP is providing financial and technical assistance to 56 developing and transition countries for conducting national inventories This book presents the results of preliminary national inventories prepared by countries participating in the US CSP that are ready to share their interim findings In some cases inventories were prepared with support from other organizations Preliminary inventories of twenty countries in Africa Asia Central and Eastern Europe and the Newly Independent States and Latin America are presented as well as regional and global syntheses of the national results The regional and global syntheses also discuss results of eleven other preliminary national inventories that have been published elsewhere with the assistance of other programs Results are discussed in the context of national and regional socioeconomic characteristics and the regional and global syntheses compare national inventory estimates to other published estimates that are based largely on international databases Papers also discuss inventory development issues such as data collection and emission factor determination and problems associated with applying the IPCC inventory methodologies The preliminary inventory results reported here represent significant progress towards meeting country commitments under the Framework Convention and provide useful information for refining international greenhouse gas emission databases and improving inventory methodologies As the first book to compile national greenhouse gas emission estimates prepared by national experts in developing countries and countries with economies in transition this will be an invaluable resource to scientists policymakers and development specialists in national regional and global anthropogenic sources and sinks of greenhouse gases

Inventory of U.S. Greenhouse Gas Emissions and Sinks, 2002 National Action Plan for Reducing Greenhouse Gas Emissions United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, 1993

Effects of U.S. Tax Policy on Greenhouse Gas Emissions Committee on the Effects of Provisions in the Internal Revenue Code on Greenhouse Gas Emissions, Board on Science Technology and Economic Policy, 2013-06-20 The U S Congress charged the National Academies with conducting a review of the Internal Revenue Code to identify the types of and specific tax provisions that have the largest effects on carbon and other greenhouse gas emissions and to estimate the magnitude of those effects To address such a broad charge the National Academies appointed a committee composed of experts in tax policy energy and environmental modeling economics environmental law climate science and related areas For scientific background to produce Effects of U S Tax Policy on Greenhouse Gas Emissions the committee relied on the earlier findings and studies by the National Academies the U S government and other research organizations The committee has relied on earlier reports and studies to set the boundaries of the economic environmental and regulatory assumptions for the present study The major economic and environmental assumptions are those developed by the U S Energy Information Administration EIA in its annual reports and modeling Additionally the committee has relied upon publicly available data provided by the U S Environmental Protection Agency which inventories greenhouse gas GHG emissions from different sources in the United States The tax system affects emissions primarily through changes in the prices of inputs and outputs or goods and services Most of the tax provisions considered in this report relate directly to the production or consumption of different energy sources However there is a substantial set of tax expenditures called broad based that favor certain categories of consumption among them employer provided health care owner occupied housing and purchase of new plants and equipment

Effects of U S Tax Policy on Greenhouse Gas Emissions examines both tax expenditures and excise taxes that could have a significant impact on GHG emissions Greenhouse Gases and Their Impact Bernard F. Shulk,2007 As the US population increases the need for energy sources such as electricity petroleum and industrial processes and the resulting emissions are growing at an alarming rate Emissions that increase the rate of global warming include carbon dioxide methane nitrous oxide and other greenhouse gases This book examines current challenges encountered in attempting to reduce the consumption of fossil fuels as well as developing alternative methods of producing energy Verifying Greenhouse Gas Emissions National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate,Committee on Methods for Estimating Greenhouse Gas Emissions,2010-07-28 The world s nations are moving toward agreements that will bind us together in an effort to limit future greenhouse gas emissions With such agreements will come the need for all nations to make accurate estimates of greenhouse gas emissions and to monitor changes over time In this context the present book focuses on the greenhouse gases that result from human activities have long lifetimes in the atmosphere and thus will change global climate for decades to millennia or more and are currently included in international agreements The book devotes considerably more space to CO₂ than to the other gases because CO₂ is the largest single contributor to global climate change and is thus the focus of many mitigation efforts Only data in the public domain were considered because public access and transparency are necessary to build trust in a climate treaty The book concludes that each country could estimate fossil fuel CO₂ emissions accurately enough to support monitoring of a climate treaty However current methods are not sufficiently accurate to check these self reported estimates against independent data or to estimate other greenhouse gas emissions Strategic investments would within 5 years improve reporting of emissions by countries and yield a useful capability for independent verification of greenhouse gas emissions reported by countries Public Policy in the United States Rushefsky, This widely respected book offers a unique dualistic view of the policy process First it introduces readers to the American approach to public policy making as it has been shaped by our political institutions changing circumstances and ideology Second it informs readers concisely and even handedly about U S policies in eight major policy realms with well selected illustrations case studies and study questions In addition to providing analytical tools and empirical information the book imparts an appreciation of the widely shared but often competing values that must be balanced and rebalanced in the ongoing policy making process affecting issues of the highest concern to the American public For this new edition all of the policy chapters especially those on economic policy foreign policy the environment and education have been very substantially revised and updated Global Climate Change John Blodgett,2002
