Idema,Beata Grant,2020-03-23 One of the most exciting recent developments in the study of Chinese literature has been the rediscovery of an extremely rich and diverse tradition of women's writing of the imperial period 221 B C E 1911 C E Many of these writings are of considerable literary quality Others provide us with moving insights into the lives and feelings of a surprisingly diverse group of women living in Confucian China a society that perhaps more than any other is known for its patriarchal tradition Because of the burgeoning interest in the study of both premodern and modern women in China several scholarly books articles and even anthologies of women's poetry have been published in the last two decades This anthology differs from previous works by offering a glimpse of women's writings not only in poetry but in other genres as well including essays and letters drama religious writing and narrative fiction The authors have presented the selections within their respective biographical and historical contexts This comprehensive approach helps to clarify traditional Chinese ideas on the nature and function of literature as well as on the role of the woman writer Rhapsody in Red Sheila Melvin, Jindong Cai, 2004 Western classical music has become as Chinese as Peking Opera and it has woven its way into the hearts and lives of ordinary Chinese people This lucidly written account traces the biographies of the bold visionaries who carried out this musical merger Rhapsody in Red is a history of classical music in China that revolves around a common theme how Western classical music entered China and how it became Chinese China's oldest orchestra was founded in 1879 two years before the Boston Symphony Since then classical music has woven its way into the lives of ordinary Chinese people Millions of Chinese children take piano and violin lessons every week Yet despite the importance of classical music in China and of Chinese classical musicians and composers to the world next to nothing has been written on this fascinating subject The authors capture the events with the voice of an insider and the perspective of a Westerner presenting new information original research and insights into a topic that has barely been broached elsewhere Every chapter is as exiting as it is revealing The book is thoroughly researched with superb bibliography I am ecstatic my students will be electrified Clive M Marks Chairman The London College of Music Trestee Trinity College of Music and The London Philharmonic Orchestra

Reflections on Dream of the Red Chamber , Authorship and Text-making in Early China Hanmo Zhang, 2018-10-08 This book is a timely response to a rather urgent call to seek an updated methodology in rereading and reappraising early Chinese texts in light of newly discovered early writings For a long time the concept of authorship in the formation and transmission of early Chinese texts has been misunderstood The nominal author who should mainly function as a guide to text formation and interpretation is considered retrospectively as the originator and writer of the text This book illustrates that although some notions about the text as the author's property began to appear in some Eastern Han texts a strict correlation between the author and the text results from later conceptions of literary history Before the modern era there existed a conceptual gap between an author and a writer A pre modern Chinese text could have had both an author and a writer or even multiple authors and multiple writers This work is the first study addressing these issues by more systematically emphasizing the connection of the text the author and the religious and sociopolitical settings in which these issues were embedded It is expected to constitute a palpable contribution to Chinese studies and the discipline of philology in general
