Empress Has No Closure:

Radical Poetics and Secular Jewish Culture Stephen Paul Miller, Daniel Morris, 2010 This collection of essays is the first to address this often obscured dimension of modern and contemporary poetry the secular Jewish dimension Editors Daniel Morris and Stephen Paul Miller asked their contributors to address what constitutes radical poetry written by Jews defined as secular and whether or not there is a Jewish component or dimension to radical and modernist poetic practice in general These poets and critics address these questions by exploring the legacy of those poets who preceded and influenced them Stein Zukofsky Reznikoff Oppen and Ginsberg among others Department of Defense Authorization for Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1994 and the Future Years Defense Program United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Armed Services, 1993 The Indian High Court Reports ,1924 Open Letter ,2008 The Spectator ,1848 A weekly review of politics literature theology and art Side/Lines Rob McLennan, 2009 This anthology offers refereshing cogent and insightful explanations of why young poets and writers do what they do The thirty pieces in side lines OCo by a unique variety of Canadian writers working in numerous genres OCo reflect on why writers write Their reflections are not to be held as gospel or lifelong theories but can be considered writing strategies drawn up at specific points in time informed by certain unavoidable material conditions such as current politics and emotions Ask these writers to explain their craft in ten years and you may be surprised by their answers Feminist Bookstore News ,1992 The Arts of 17th-Century Science Claire Jowitt, Diane Watt, 2017-03-02 Contemporary ideals of science representing disinterested and objective fields of investigation have their origins in the seventeenth century However new science did not simply or uniformly replace earlier beliefs about the workings of the natural world but entered into competition with them It is this complex process of competition and negotiation concerning ways of seeing the natural world that is charted by the essays in this book The collection traces the many overlaps between literary and scientific discourses as writers in this period attempted both to understand imaginatively and empirically the workings of the natural world and shows that a discrete separation between such discourses and spheres is untenable The collection is designed around four main themes Philosophy Thought and Natural Knowledge Religion Politics and the Natural World Gender Sexuality and Scientific Thought and New Worlds and New Philosophies Within these themes the contributors focus on the contests between different ways of seeing and understanding the natural world in a wide range of writings from the period in poetry and art in political texts in descriptions of real and imagined colonial landscapes as well as in more obviously scientific documents How to Read Chinese Poetry Workbook Jie Cui, Zong-qi Cai, 2012 Designed to work with the acclaimed course text How to Read Chinese Poetry A Guided Anthology the How to Read Chinese Poetry Workbook introduces classical Chinese to advanced beginners and learners at higher levels teaching them how to appreciate Chinese poetry in its original form Also a remarkable stand alone resource the volume illuminates China's major poetic genres and themes through one hundred well known easy to recite works Each of the volume's twenty units contains four to six classical poems in Chinese English and tone marked pinyin romanization with comprehensive vocabulary notes and prose poem translations in modern Chinese Subsequent comprehension questions and comments focus on the artistic aspects of the poems while exercises test readers grasp of both classical and modern Chinese words phrases and syntax An extensive glossary cross references classical and modern Chinese usage characters and compounds and multiple character meanings and online sound recordings are provided for each poem and its prose translation free of charge A list of literary issues addressed throughout completes the volume along with phonetic transcriptions for entering tone characters which appear in Tang and Song regulated shi poems and lyric songs

There Is No Crime for Those Who Have Christ
Michael Gaddis, 2005-10-14 There is no crime for those who have Christ claimed a fifth century zealot neatly expressing the belief of religious extremists that righteous zeal for God trumps worldly law This book provides an in depth and penetrating look at religious violence and the attitudes that drove it in the Christian Roman Empire of the fourth and fifth centuries a unique period shaped by the marriage of Christian ideology and Roman imperial power Drawing together materials spanning a wide chronological and geographical range Gaddis asks what religious conflict meant to those involved both perpetrators and victims and how violence was experienced represented justified or contested His innovative analysis reveals how various groups employed the language of religious violence to construct their own identities to undermine the legitimacy of their rivals and to advance themselves in the competitive and high stakes process of Christianizing the Roman Empire Gaddis pursues case studies and themes including martyrdom and persecution the Donatist controversy and other sectarian conflicts zealous monks assaults on pagan temples the tyrannical behavior of powerful bishops and the intrigues of church councils In addition to illuminating a core issue of late antiquity this book also sheds light on thematic and comparative dimensions of religious violence in other times including our own

Snakes' Legs Martin W. Huang, 2004-09-30 Snakes Legs examines sequels xushu a common but long neglected literary phenomenon in traditional China What prompted writers to produce sequels despite their poor reputation as a genre What motivated readers to read them How should we characterize the nature of the relationship between sequels and rewritings Contributors to this volume illuminate these and other questions and the collection as a whole offers a comprehensive consideration of this vigorous genre while suggesting fascinating new directions for research Xushu as a discursive practice reinforces the paradox that innovation is impossible without imitation It presents us with fertile ground for studying the intricate ties that bind the writer and reader of traditional Chinese fiction the writer of xushu is always self consciously assuming the dual role of author and reader and in the writing process must consider both the work in progress as well as its precursor s Snakes Legs contains detailed discussions of some representative xushu works from the late Ming and Qing periods many of which have received little scholarly attention It will shed light on the development of Chinese fiction and the various textual practices in traditional China as well as account for the genre s continuing vitality in modern times
