Mexican National Identity William H. Beezley, 2008-05-29 In this enlightening book the well known historian William Beezley contends that a Mexican national identity was forged during the nineteenth century not by a self anointed elite but rather by a disparate mix of ordinary people and everyday events. In examining independence festivals, children's games, annual almanacs and the performances of itinerant puppet theaters, Beezley argues that these seemingly unrelated and commonplace occurrences, not the far more self-conscious and organized efforts of politicians, teachers and others, created a far-reaching sense of a new nation. In the century that followed Mexico's independence from Spain in 1821, Beezley maintains, sentiments of nationality were promulgated by people who were concerned not with the promotion of nationalism but with something far more immediate: the need to earn a living. These peddlers, vendors, actors, artisans, writers, publishers and puppeteers sought widespread popular appeal so that they could earn money. According to Beezley, they constantly refined their performances as well as the symbols and images they employed in order to secure larger revenues. Gradually, they discovered the stories, acts and products that attracted the largest numbers of paying customers. As Beezley convincingly asserts, out of what sold to the masses a collective national identity slowly emerged. Mexican National Identity makes an important contribution to the growing body of literature that explores the influences of popular culture on issues of national identity. By looking at identity as it was fashioned in the streets, it opens new avenues for exploring identity formation more generally, not just in Mexico and Latin American countries but in every nation.
