

The Political Economy of Food Price Policy in BANGLADESH

Research Brief No. 14

April 2013

SELIM RAIHAN

Global food price hikes during 2007 and 2008 resulted in a sharp rise in staple food prices in Bangladesh, which in turn led to a significant rise in the number of households falling below the poverty line. On the political front, Bangladesh was run by an unelected and undemocratic “civil” caretaker government, backed by the military, which remained in power until the end of 2008 and undertook several steps to contain price hikes. Some of these policies and programs were effective, and some were not.

Rice is central in the consumption basket.

Food security in Bangladesh is strongly linked to the production, import, and price stability of rice. Bangladesh is a net rice-importing country, but rice imports in Bangladesh have traditionally been erratic, depending on domestic production, which is often affected by natural calamities. Self-sufficiency in rice production has long been a national objective. With expanded cultivation of high-yielding paddy varieties, the once critical dependence on imports has subsided.

Bangladesh has been vulnerable to human-caused and natural calamities that threatened food security.

Since independence in 1971, Bangladesh has faced a number of human-caused and natural calamities that have threatened the food security of poor and marginalized people. These calamities include a famine in 1974, floods in 1987 and 1988, a cyclone in 1991, a flood in 1998, and a cyclone in 2007. The government responded to these crises by supplying food for immediate relief and by helping to coordinate food aid commitments and deliveries. At the same time, as part of its price stabilization strategy, the government encouraged private sector imports, a policy that helped avoid food shortages.

The government adopted various policy measures in response to the food price hike in 2007–2008.

The government undertook a number of initiatives to promote agricultural development. These included a subsidy on fertilizer; a rehabilitation program for people affected by floods and cyclones; endowment funds for agricultural research and development; a subsidy on diesel fuel for small and marginal farmers; cash incentives for exporting agricultural products; rebates on electricity bills for entrepreneurs of agro-based industries; reduced interest rates for loans for the production of pulses, oil seeds, and spices; and distribution of agricultural and rural credit through state-owned commercial banks. Total operative tariffs on rice and wheat were reduced to zero. The annual renewal fee for value-added tax (VAT) registration by commercial importers was withdrawn. The government arranged distribution of food grains through various safety net programs, strengthened distribution of rice and pulses to the poor through BDR's Dal-Bhat program, and increased the coverage and amount of individual grants under social safety net programs. The central bank expanded agricultural credit, facilitated the distribution of subsidies on agricultural inputs, and provided soft loans for new importers of food items.

M'Barek,2011-06-10 This book examines the issue of price volatility in agricultural commodities markets and how this phenomenon has evolved in recent years The factors underlying the price spike of 2007 08 appear to be global and macroeconomic in nature including the rapid growth in demand by developing countries the international financial crisis and exchange rate movements Some of these factors are new appearing as influences on price volatility only in the last decade Although volatility has always been a feature of agricultural commodity markets the evidence suggests that volatility has increased in certain commodity markets A growing problem is that agricultural price shocks and volatility disrupt agricultural markets economic incentives and incomes With increased globalization and integration of financial and energy markets with agricultural commodity markets the relationships between markets are expanding and becoming more complex When a crisis such as a regional drought food safety scare or a financial crisis hits a particular market policy makers often do not know the extent to which it will impact on other markets and affect producer consumer and trader decisions Including contributions from experts at the World Bank the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations the USDA and the European Commission the research developed throughout the chapters of this book is based on current methodologies that can be used to analyze price volatility and provide directions for understanding this volatility and the development of new agricultural policies The book highlights the challenges facing policy makers in dealing with the changing nature of agricultural commodities markets and offers recommendations for anticipating price movements and managing their consequences It will be a practical guide for both present and future policy makers in deciding on potential price stabilizing interventions and will also serve as a useful resource for researchers and students in agricultural economics

Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Asia Kym

Anderson,Will Martin,2009-02-04 The vast majority of the world s poorest households depend on farming for their livelihoods During the 1960s and 1970s most developing countries imposed pro urban and anti agricultural policies while many high income countries restricted agricultural imports and subsidized their farmers Both sets of policies inhibited economic growth and poverty alleviation in developing countries Although progress has been made over the past two decades to reduce those policy biases many trade and welfare reducing price distortions remain between agriculture and other sectors and within the agricultural sector of both rich and poor countries Comprehensive empirical studies of the disarray in world agricultural markets appeared approximately 20 years ago Since then the Organisation for Economic Co operation and Development had provided estimates each year of market distortions in high income countries but there have been no comparable estimates for the world s developing countries This volume is the third in a series other volumes cover Africa Europe s transition economies and Latin America and the Caribbean that not only fills that void for recent years but extends the estimates in a consistent and comparable way back in time and provides analytical narratives for scores of countries that shed light on the evolving nature and extent of policy interventions over the past half century Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Asia provides an overview of the evolution of distortions to agricultural incentives caused by price and trade policies in the 12 largest economies of East and South Asia Together these countries constitute more than 95 percent of the region s population agricultural output and overall GDP Sectoral trade and exchange rate policies in the region have changed greatly since the 1950s and there have been substantial reforms since the 1980s most notably in China and India Nonetheless numerous price distortions in this region remain and others have added in recent years The new empirical indicators in these country studies provide a strong evidence based foundation for assessing the successes and failures of the past and for evaluating policy options for the years ahead
