

The background of the entire image is a repeating pattern of intricate drawings. These include stylized floral motifs, scrolling vines, and a prominent illustration of a long-haired dog, possibly a Saluki, in a dynamic pose. The drawings are rendered in a traditional style with fine lines and some color washes.

India was home to a series of important and highly cultured Muslim courts. Subtly blending elements from Iran, West Asia, southern India, and northern India, the arts produced under these sultanates are markedly different from those of the rest of India and especially from those produced under Mughal patronage. This publication is a result of a 2008 symposium held at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, investigating the arts of Deccan and the unique output in the fields of painting, literature, architecture, arms, textiles, and carpet.

The Rhinoceros of South Asia Kees Rookmaaker, 2024-04-30. The rhinoceros is an iconic animal. Three species once inhabited South Asia, two of which disappeared over a century ago. This survey aims to reconstruct the historical distribution of these large mammals, resulting in new maps showing the extent of their occurrences. Thousands of sources, varied in time and nature, are used to study the interactions between man and rhinoceros. The text is supported by over 700 illustrations and 38 maps showing the importance of the rhinoceros in the scientific and cultural fabric of Asia and beyond.

From Mind, Heart, and Hand Stuart Cary Welch, Kimberly Masteller, 2004. A superb selection of drawings from the extraordinary collection of Stuart Cary Welch. Stuart Cary Welch's collection of Persian, Turkish, and Indian art is renowned throughout the world for its quality and depth. In 1999, Welch made a generous gift of drawings to the Harvard University Art Museums, which form the basis of the present catalogue. Spanning five centuries and extending from Istanbul to Calcutta, these drawings represent the great empires of the Ottomans in Turkey, the Safavids in Iran, and the Mughals in India, as well as numerous regional Hindu kingdoms. This beautifully illustrated book presents more than seventy exquisite drawings, some of which are counted among the greatest Indian, Persian, or Turkish drawings ever made, and explores the connections between the arts and artists of the three cultures. As with drawings from European traditions, the works display an immediacy that is often absent in paintings. The drawings deal with fascinating and diverse subjects, ranging from court portraits, stories from fable and myth, and hunting scenes to animals, flowers, and people sketched from life. The contributors to the book shed light on various aspects of the drawings and the artists, and Welch offers an engaging account of his trials and triumphs while acquiring the works in his unparalleled collection. This book is the catalogue for an exhibition at the Asian Art Museum of San Francisco, September 17 to November 28, 2004, and at the Harvard University Art Museums, March 19 to June 12, 2005.

Prints as Agents of Global Exchange Heather Madar, 2025-10-01. The significance of the media and communications revolution occasioned by printmaking was profound. Less a part of the standard narrative of printmaking's significance is recognition of the frequency with which the widespread dissemination of printed works also occurred beyond the borders of Europe and consideration of the impact of this broader movement of printed objects. Within a decade of the invention of the Gutenberg press, European prints began to move globally. Over the course of the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries, numerous prints produced in Europe traveled to areas as varied as Turkey, India, Iran, Ethiopia, China, Japan, and the Americas, where they were taken by missionaries, artists, travelers, merchants, and diplomats. This collection of essays explores the global circulation of knowledge, both written and visual, that occurred by means of prints in the Early
