

Transition from Social philosophy to Sociology

Sociology is one of the newer academic disciplines, tracing its origins no further back than the middle of the nineteenth century. It has a short history. Sociology, the science of society, is the youngest and it came to be established only in the nineteenth century. The French philosopher, Auguste Comte gave sociology and a programme for its development. For thousands of years, society has been a subject for speculation and enquiry. Yet sociology is modern science that originated only within the last hundred eighty-one years or so.

The study of society, however, can be traced to the Greek philosophers, Plato and Aristotle. The philosophical basis of Plato and Aristotle characterized the observations of man for a very long period of time. The literature concerning society and its problems found a place in the Republic of Plato (427-347 B.C.) and in the Politic and Ethics of Aristotle (388-327 B.C.).

Plato was the first Western philosopher who attempted a systematic study of society. In the Ethics and Politics of Aristotle, we find the first major attempts of systematic dealing of law, the society and State.

In the sixteenth century, a precise distinction was made between State and society. Thomas Hobbes and Machiavelli were outstanding contributors to the realistic approach to social problems. Hobbes in his Levithan and Machiavelli in his Prince analyses the system of statecraft and also put forward conditions for the success of the State.

Eighteenth-century Europe witnessed the publication of a number of great works of observation, for example, Rousseau's social contract and Montesquieu's De l'esprit des lois. These writings were still in the philosophical tradition, but they contained sufficient analysis to lay the foundation for a separate social science.

Various social sciences gradually evolved in response to the varied needs of human living. The writings in the philosophical tradition laid the foundation for the development of social sciences. With the passage of time, various social sciences developed one after another and began to pursue

From History to Sociology Carlo Antoni, 1959 From History to Sociology Carlo Antoni, 1962 From History to Sociology Carlo Antoni, 1985 From History to Sociology Carlo Antoni, 2003-01-01 The Theory and Scholarship of Talcott Parsons to 1951 Bruce C. Wearne, 1989 Bruce C. Wearne's detailed examination of Talcott Parsons' development as a scholar of social theory Transitions to Sustainable Development John Grin, Jan Rotmans, Johan Schot, 2010-05-26 Over the past few decades there has been a growing concern about the social and environmental risks which have come along with the progress achieved through a variety of mutually intertwined modernization processes. In recent years these concerns are transformed into a widely shared sense of urgency partly due to events such as the various pandemics threatening livestock and increasing awareness of the risks and realities of climate change and the energy and food crises. This sense of urgency includes an awareness that our entire social system is in need of fundamental transformation. But like the earlier transition between the 1750s and 1890s from a pre-modern to a modern industrial society, this second transition is also a contested one. Sustainable development is only one of many options. This book addresses the issue on how to understand the dynamics and governance of the second transition dynamics in order to ensure sustainable development. It will be necessary reading for students and scholars with an interest in sustainable development and long-term transformative change. From History to Sociology Antoni, 1974-02-01 Modelling Transitions Enayat A. Moallemi, Fjalar J. de Haan, 2019-11-28 Modelling Transitions shows what computational formal and data-driven approaches can and could mean for sustainability transitions research, presenting the state of the art and exploring what lies beyond. Featuring contributions from many well-known authors, this book presents the various benefits of modelling for transitions research. More than just taking stock, it also critically examines what modelling of transformative change means and could mean for transitions research and for other disciplines that study societal changes. This includes identifying a variety of approaches currently not part of the portfolios of transitions modellers. Far from only singing praise, critical methodological and philosophical introspection are key aspects of this important book. This book speaks to modellers and non-modellers alike who value the development of robust knowledge on transitions to sustainability, including colleagues in congenial fields. Be they students, researchers, or practitioners, everyone interested in transitions should find this book relevant as a reference resource and guide. The Green Transition in Motorsport Hans Erik Næss, Samuel Tickell, 2024-10-28 This book is a critical exploration of motorsport's contribution to the green transition, understood as a societal shift towards a fossil-free future, a circular economy, and greater social inclusiveness. The book takes a critical look at the historical impact of motorsport and the current business and sporting models that determine its sustainability, as well as the innovation that might contribute solutions to wider social and environmental problems. Drawing on perspectives from sociology, media, and sport business, the book unpacks the complexity of stakeholder interests in motorsport that might constrain positive change. Presenting cases and data from Formula One, Formula E,

Extreme E the World Rally Championship NASCAR and the World Endurance Championship the book considers the technological and organizational change required to address the triple bottom line of financial environmental and social sustainability and looks at how audiences markets teams governing bodies corporations and state actors combine to shape the social and economic environments within which motorsport takes place Representing a unique case study of the impact of elite sport on wider society this book is fascinating reading for anybody with an interest in motorsport sport business sustainable business or environment society and culture The Houses of History Anna Green,Kathleen Troup,1999-03 Provides a comprehensive introduction to the twelve schools of thought which have had the greatest influence on the study of history in the twentieth century Ranging from Empiricism to Postcolonialism Marxism to the Ethnohistorians each chapter begins with an introduction to the particular school the main protagonists the critics and is followed by a useful section of further readings From the classic such as G R Elton s England Under the Tudors and E P Thompson s The Making of the English Working Class to the recent such as Henrietta Whiteman s White Buffalo Woman and Judith Walkowitz s City of Dreadful Delight the diverse selections collected here bring together the leading historians and theorists of the century
