Practical Interventions for Young People at Risk Kathryn Geldard, 2009-07-09 The book's rich relevant and comprehensive contributions from experienced writers make it a substantial resource for teaching reference and research Mark Prever trainer writer and supervisor The needs and problems of young people are currently extremely topical and justify a dedicated textbook The wide range of internationally renowned authors contributes to the strengths and diversity of this publication enhancing its potential as a resource for students and professionals Jenny Pinfield University of Worcester This book responds to the urgent need for practical intervention approaches targeting young people at risk It provides a much needed practical resource for practitioners and students from a variety of helping professions Focussing on interventions that practitioners can use in collaboration with the young person the book offers hands on strategies for addressing challenges and issues typically face by young people such as Depression suicide and self harm Substance Misuse Problematic Sexual Behaviour Marginalised Youth Mental Health Issues Throughout the book multi disciplinary and international authors share their expertise highlighting relevant evidence based interventions and considering themes such as anti oppressive practice culture values and ethics It will prove invaluable reading for students and practitioners working with young people especially in the fields of youth work social work psychology counselling and education Applied Ecological Psychology for

Schools Within Communities Jody L. Swartz, William E. Martin, Jody L. Swartz-Kulstad, 2013-01-11 This volume provides a thorough examination of the interplay between individuals and their environment in the development and maintenance of problem behaviors and delineates procedures for conducting assessment intervention and prevention within the child's ecosystem As individuals structure change and organize their environments their environments work to do the same

Environmental or contextual and individual variables act reciprocally to shape an individual's behavior. For school-aged youth, this reality necessitates an ecological approach to assessment, intervention, and prevention. Specifically, problem behaviors are partly developed and maintained by a combination of factors present in the child's psychosocial ecosystem: home, school, and community. Although there is an abundance of theoretical applications and research supporting this concept, the predominant trend has been to emphasize the properties of the person. As a result, one is left to assume that the genesis of difficulties in adaptation lies in internal or personal states and traits of the individual. In contrast to traditional psychology theories which focus primarily on the individual, incorporation of ecological psychology concepts allows for a more comprehensive and in-depth analysis of sources contributing to the individual's ability to adapt to their psychosocial environment. Ecological theories which drive assessment, intervention, and prevention efforts provide the necessary framework for assisting school-aged youth and their associated ecological networks to cope with and overcome the multidetermined, multifaceted concerns that arise during the school years. However, this is an often difficult and cumbersome task for educators, parents, and school systems to undertake. To this end, this volume focuses on the functional application of ecological psychology for schools within communities. Each of the 10 chapters, written by key figures in school, family, counseling, and community psychology, explores the use of ecological theory from a different perspective, ranging from focus on the child, the child within the classroom, the classroom teacher, and the community to considerations in working with special populations such as juvenile delinquents and in planning for developmental issues such as school-to-work transition. The final chapter summarizes and integrates the previous chapters and provides suggestions for future directions in the field.

Peervention Robert D. Myrick, Betsy E. Folk, 1991. PEERVENTION, a marriage between two concepts: PEER facilitation and preVENTION. Education is designed to equip students to assist others in both individual and group settings with the prevention of school disorientation, academic failure, depression, and suicide, eating disorders, family distress, substance abuse, body assault, career indecision, and community unrest. Ideal as a textbook for comprehensive peer helper or service learning programs.
