Citizenship Education and Lifelong Learning Michael Williams, Graham Humphrys, 2003 Across the globe citizenship education is high on the reform agendas of policy makers and educators The collapse of the Soviet Union and the entry of former Soviet bloc states into the European Union the fragmentation of the former Yugoslavia the major population movements from poor to rich countries and the increased threats of international terrorism and civil wars in many states have all added to the need to provide up dated and reflective approaches to citizenship education Within nation states the impact of globalisation on social economic and political structures has caused power shifts across and within international borders demanding greater citizenship awareness and participation The effect of these changes and the practice and needs of citizenship are profoundly affected by the distinctive particulars of the places in which they occur This is an essential ingredient in any understanding of what is happening and of any program addressing the resulting citizenship challenges Too often citizenship education has been perceived simply as a matter for schools In this book the discussion is extended to embrace post school education It is acknowledged that the educa Curriculum, Culture and Citizenship Education in

Alan Hodgkinson and Philip Vickerman provide an introduction to Special Education Needs presenting a critical perspective on the main ideological and political debates that have helped to shape its development. Combining critical exploration with an overview of future challenges, this timely text enables students to develop a basic knowledge and understanding of the field, leaving them better able to engage in meaningful and informed discussion on the issues surrounding it. Education Policy and Social Reproduction John Fitz, Brian Davies, John Evans, 2005-11-16. This book takes a theoretically informed look at British education policy over the last sixty years when secondary schooling for all children became an established fact for the first time. Comprehensive schools largely replaced a system based on academic selection. Now, under choice and competition policies, all schools are subject to the rigours of local education markets. What impact did each of these successive policy frameworks have on structures of opportunities for families and their children? How and to what extent was the experience of secondary school students shaped and what influenced the qualifications they obtained and their life chances after schooling? The authors locate their work within two broad strands in the sociology of education. Basil Bernstein's work on the realisation of power and control in and through pedagogic discourse and social reproduction provides a theoretical framework for exploring the character of and continuities and change in education and training policies. The book is an important contribution to debates about the extent to which education is a force for change in class-divided societies. The authors also set out to re-establish social class at the centre of educational analysis at a time when emphasis has been on identity and identity formation, arguing for their interdependence. This book will be an important resource for students, policy analysts and policymakers wishing to think through and understand the longer-term impact of programmes that have shaped secondary schooling in Britain and elsewhere. Economy, Work, and Education Catherine Casey, 2016-07-27. Economy, Work, and Education: Critical Connections addresses effects of neoliberal capitalism in particular regard to work and education. It reveals limits and paradoxes in macroeconomic policy imperatives toward knowledge-based economies and learning societies and elaborates ensuing critical concerns and dilemmas. It concludes with an exploration of innovative conceptions of social citizenship which may stimulate sources of a revitalization of work and education beyond singular economic imperatives.

Policy, Discourse and Rhetoric Marie Lall, 2012-09-11. This is not yet another book on New Labour and neoliberalism, but the only book which uses policy case study evidence to show the rhetorical nature of the commitment New Labour appeared to have been making to education. Unlike other books on that era, this one aims to review New Labour's time in government through specific policy texts. This book reviews some of the major policy shifts in the education sector, analysing selected case study policies in order to articulate dominant discourses in recent policy making which have helped establish a particular hegemony. The book's originality lies in its policy analysis and case study base, whereby key policy texts across different sectors are dissected using the policy cycle framework, allowing for an in-depth analysis of the policy discourse as well as a discussion on how the neoliberal agenda was reflected and/or promoted. Education is often only perceived as limited to policies relating to schools and higher education However the book seeks to demonstrate that education as a sector is a much broader field and therefore the areas covered include key policies in citizenship and youth work widening participation in higher education the place of inclusive education in the curriculum the undergraduate medical curriculum and the effect of the Cox review on creativity In effect the broad selection of sectors demonstrates that New Labour s education policies were not only detrimental in traditional education settings but also affected areas such as medicine and the media which are of importance to those who no longer are affected by what happens in institutions of learning and teaching The book is consequently relevant for a much wider audience beyond the education community
