The Psychology of Media and Politics George Comstock, Erica Scharrer, 2005-05-31 Research indicates that people discount their own opinions and experiences in favor of those of experts as espoused in the media The framing of news coverage thus has a profound impact on public opinion and political decision making as a response to public outcry However the choice of how to frame the news is typically made to solicit viewership and high ratings rather than to convey accurate and meaningful information The Psychology of Media and Politics discusses why people discount their own opinions how the media shapes the news when this drives political decision making and what the effect is on the future of society Issues addressed include How powerful are the media in shaping political beliefs judgment How has this power changed in recent years How does media influence voting behavior To what extent do media opinions affect political decision making Demonstrates the ways in which the media both constrain and facilitate democratic participation Provides insight into why individuals have varying levels of attention to and interest in politics Discusses such issues as political advertising polls debates and journalists pursuit of scandal Describes why only some Americans turn out to vote in prominent elections Offers a model of personal versus social level influences that extends beyond politics into other important topic areas Brings together research and theories from the fields of Communication Psychology and Political Science Reviews hundreds of key sources both historical and contemporary instruction but do not influence student achievement any more than the truck that delivers our groceries causes changes in our nutrition is as misunderstood today as it was when first published in the Review of Educational Research in 1983 The convincing if little read scientific evidence presented by Clark has divided the field and caused considerable concern especially among the providers of newer media for learning A collection of writings about the media effects debate as it has come to be called was published in 2001 Edited by Clark Learning From Media was the first volume in the series Perspectives in Instructional Technology and Distance Education The series editors are convinced that the writings of Clark and those who take issue with his position are of critical importance to the field of instructional technology Thus a revised second edition of Learning From Media is now being offered The debate about the impact of media on learning remains a fundamental issue as new mediated approaches to teaching and learning are developed and Clark s work should be at the center of the discussion The critical articles on both sides of this debate are contained in Learning From Media 2nd Edition
