For the first ten years that I was at Ramanasramam (1928–38) Bhagavan made a point of keeping me busy all the time. If he ever saw that I had nothing to do he would usually think up new jobs for me, just to keep me occupied. Because of this I had very little leisure during this period. When I moved to Palakottu the situation was reversed: I had no work to do, except for my household chores, and almost unlimited free time. I decided to use this free time to meditate, to study the books that Bhagavan had prescribed for me, and to begin compiling a diary which would contain accounts of what Bhagavan had said or done. I began the diary in the second half of 1938 and made regular entries for about a year.

Several of the stories in the preceding chapters were originally written in this diary in 1938 or 1939. Some of the other entries found their way into Talks with Sri Ramana Maharshi (Talks 530–32 and 534–61).

Since that still left many interesting dialogues unpublished, I decided to include most of the remainder of the entries in this chapter.

The questions and answers given below do not purport to be a systematic account of Bhagavan's teachings. Rather, they are a fairly representative sample of the types of dialogue that took place in the old hall in the late 1930s.

The following questions were asked by an aristocratic-looking American lady. Bhagavan's answers are a succinct summary of his practical teachings.

Question: What is the truth that I have to attain? Please explain it and show it to me.

Bhagavan: What we have to attain and what is desired by everyone is endless happiness. Although we seek to attain it in various ways, it is not something to be sought or attained as a new
