Media, Public Relations, and Crisis Management, 2002 The following bibliography is the result of a broad based literature search of dissertations journal articles conference papers and other sources These references focus on media response public relations corporate ethics and crisis management aspects of the Exxon Valdez oil spill and represent a variety of perspectives Executive Action Crisis Management Workbook James E. Lukaszewski, 1992-01-01 Apology Not Accepted Todd D. Harcek, 2018 This research builds upon the scholarship in crisis communication strategies and apologia employed by companies during a crisis Within the expansive domain of crisis management this work evaluates the media coverage and crisis communication strategies during three major oil spills the Exxon Valdez the American Trader and the BP Gulf oil spill The purpose of this study is to provide practitioners researchers and others additional insight into the impact of media coverage on prior current and future crises and how this coverage coupled with the communication strategies of companies during a crisis can influence public awareness or perception Furthermore this work examines how some crises are referenced over time and can be linked with other crises and that the public awareness of a crisis through continued or sustained media and scholarly references can exist well beyond the presumed resolution of a crisis The study reveals that crises spread to others can be overshadowed by other crises and can result in an echo that lasts for years This research expands on the work of Hearit 1994 1995 1999 2006 Benoit 1995 1997 2004 and others by incorporating public statements by CEOs and executives into a holistic evaluation of the communication strategies present during crises Specifically this work contends that unscripted or spontaneous comments made by top executives often contradict or undermine prepared planned crisis communication strategies implemented by a company during a crisis and can influence media coverage narratives of the event and public perception As such additional categories were identified to encapsulate the expanded variations of rhetoric and strategies often displayed during a crisis I conclude that scholars and practitioners need to continue to expand the crisis domain through the use of interdisciplinary evaluation approaches with a continued emphasis and focus on the importance communication plays in the perceived success or failure of a company's management of a crisis
