Payne, 2012-12-06 Among Anglo American philosophers interest in mysticism has typically been limited to the question of whether or not mystical and religious experiences provide evidence for or knowledge of the existence and nature of God Most authors conclude that they do not because such experiences lack certain qualities needed in order to be counted as cognitive In this study I examine some current philosophical opinions about mysticism and objections to its epistemic significance in the context of a detailed study of the writings of a single mystical author the Spanish Carmelite Saint John of the Cross 1542-1591 I argue that from his works one can draw a coherent theory of what takes place in the Christian mystical life and will indicate how acceptance of this theory might be defended as rational through a type of inference often referred to as the Argument to the Best Explanation In this way I hope to show that mysticism still has a significant bearing on the justification of religious faith even if it cannot be used to prove the existence of God The nature and advantages of my own somewhat unusual approach to mysticism can perhaps best be explained by contrasting it with the way other authors have dealt with the subject One of the most striking developments in recent decades has been the growing fascination with mysticism meditation and the experiential aspects of religion

John of the Cross and the Cognitive Value of Mysticism Steven Payne, 1990-07-31 This book is a significant contribution to the literature on mysticism and the epistemology thereof It is recommended to all those interested in the mystics and in the question of the cognitive value of mysticism Review of Metaphysics March 1992

Remaining a classic in its field this book explains first how mysticism relates to such things as vitalism theology psychology symbolism and magic This treatment may seem unusual for Christian mysticism but it relates widely to the world as we know it and the different practices therein Part Two explores the awakening purification and illumination of yourself and gives solid groundwork for such things as voices visions dreams and other mystical experience
