Educating Deaf Students From Research To Practice:

Educating Deaf Students: From Research to Practice Marc Marschark, Harry G. Lang, John A. Albertini, 2001-11-29 Over the past decade there has been a significant increase in interest from educators and the general public about deafness special education and the development of children with special needs The education of deaf children in the United States has been seen as a remarkable success story around the world even while it continues to engender domestic debate In Educating Deaf Students From Research to Practice Marc Marschark Harry G Lang and John A Albertini set aside the politics rhetoric and confusion that often accompany discussions of deaf education Instead they offer an accessible evaluation of the research literature on the needs and strengths of deaf children and on the methods that have been used successfully and unsuccessfully to teach both deaf and hearing children The authors lay out the common assumptions that have driven deaf education for many years revealing some of them to be based on questionable methods conclusions or interpretations while others have been lost in the cacophony of alternative educational philosophies They accompany their historical consideration of how this came to pass with an evaluation of the legal and social conditions surrounding deaf education today By evaluating what we know what we do not know and what we thought we knew about learning among deaf children the authors provide parents teachers and administrators valuable new insights into educating deaf students and others with special needs ignorance have long dogged the field and faulty assumptions and overgeneralizations have persisted despite contrary evidence. A study of the history of deaf education reveals patterns that have affected educational policy and legislation for deaf people around the world. These patterns are related to several themes critical to the chapters of this volume. One such theme is the importance of parental involvement in raising and educating deaf children. Another relates to how Deaf people have taken an increasingly greater role in influencing their own futures and places in society. In published histories we see the longstanding conflicts through the centuries that pertain to sign language and spoken communication philosophies as well as the contributions of the individuals who advocated alternative strategies for teaching deaf children. More recently, investigators have recognized the need for a diverse approach to language and language learning. Advances in technology, cognitive science, linguistics, and the social sciences have alternately led and followed changes in theory and practice, resulting in a changing landscape for deaf and hard of hearing individuals and those connected to them. This second volume of the The Oxford Handbook of Deaf Studies: Language and Education (2003) picks up where that first landmark volume left off, describing those advances and offering readers the opportunity to understand the current status of research in the field while recognizing the opportunities and challenges that lie ahead. In Volume 2, an international group of contributing experts provide state-of-the-art summaries intended for students, practitioners, and researchers. Not only does it describe where we are, it helps to chart courses for the future.

Oxford Handbook of Deaf Studies, Language, and Education Marc Marschark, Professor at the National Technical Institute of the Deaf at Rochester Institute of Technology, Patricia Elizabeth Spencer, Research Professor in the Department of Social Work, Gallaudet University, 2003-03-27. In Plato's Cratylus, which dates to 360 B.C., Socrates alludes to the use of signs by deaf people. In his Natural History, completed in 79 A.D., Pliny the Elder alludes to Quintus Pedius, the deaf son of a Roman consul who had to seek permission from Caesar Augustus to pursue his training as an artist. During the Renaissance, scores of deaf people achieved fame throughout Europe, and by the middle of the 17th century, the talents and communication systems of deaf people were being studied by a variety of noted scientists and philosophers. However, the role of deaf people in society has always been hotly debated: could they be educated? Should they be educated? If so, how? How does Deaf culture exist within larger communities? What do advances in the technology and the genetics of hearing loss portend for Deaf communities? In this landmark volume, a wide range of international experts present a comprehensive and accessible overview of the diverse field of deaf studies language and education Pairing practical information with detailed analyses of what works why and for whom and banishing the paternalism once intrinsic to the field the handbook consists of specially commissioned essays on topics such as language and language development hearing and speech perception education literacy cognition and the complex cultural social and psychological issues associated with individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing Through careful planning collaboration and editing the various topics are interwoven in a manner that allows the reader to understand the current status of research in the field and recognize the opportunities and challenges that lie ahead providing the most comprehensive reference resource on deaf issues Written to be accessible to students and practitioners as well as researchers The Oxford Handbook of Deaf Studies Language and Education is a uniquely ambitious work that will alter both theoretical and applied landscapes It surveys a field that has grown dramatically over the past 40 years since sign languages were first recognized by scientists to be true languages From work on the linguistics of sign language and parent child interactions to analyses of school placement and the mapping of brain function in deaf individuals research across a wide range of disciplines has greatly expanded not just our knowledge of deafness and the deaf but of the very origins of language social interaction and thinking Bringing together historical information research and strategies for teaching and service provision Marc Marschark and Patricia Elizabeth Spencer have given us what is certain to become the benchmark reference in the field

Diversity in Deaf Education Marc Marschark, Venetta Lampropoulou, Emmanouil K. Skordilis, 2016-05-31 Deaf children are not hearing children who can t hear Beyond any specific effects of hearing loss as a group they are far more diverse than hearing peers Lack of full access to language incidental learning and social interactions as well as the possibility of secondary disabilities means that deaf learners face a variety of challenges in academic domains Technological innovations such as digital hearing aids and cochlear implants have improved hearing and the possibility of spoken language for many deaf learners but parents teachers and other professionals are just now coming to recognize that there are cognitive experiential and social emotional differences between deaf and hearing students likely to affect academic outcomes Sign languages and schools and programs for deaf learners thus remain an important part of the continuum of services needed for this diverse population Understanding such diversity and determining ways in which to accommodate them must become a top priority in educating deaf learners Through the participation of an international interdisciplinary set of scholars Diversity in Deaf Education takes a broad view of learning and academic progress considering the whole child in the context of the families languages educational settings in which they are immersed In adopting this perspective the complexities and commonalities in the social emotional cognitive and linguistic mosaic of which the deaf child is a part are captured It is only through such a holistic consideration of diverse children developing within diverse settings that we can understand their academic potentials Sign Language Interpreting and Interpreter Education Marc Marschark,Rico Peterson,Elizabeth A. Winston,Patricia Sapere,Carol M. Convertino,Rosemarie Seewagen,Christine Monikowski,2005-04-14 More the 1 46 million people in the United States have hearing losses in sufficient severity to be considered deaf another 21 million people have other hearing impairments For many deaf and hard of hearing individuals sign language and voice interpreting is essential to their participation in educational programs and their access to public and private services However there is less than half the number of interpreters needed to meet the demand interpreting quality is often variable and there is a considerable lack of knowledge of factors that contribute to successful interpreting Perhaps it is not surprising then that a study by the National Association of the Deaf NAD found that 70% of the deaf individuals are dissatisfied with interpreting quality Because recent legislation in the United States and elsewhere has mandated access to educational employment and other contexts for deaf individuals and others with hearing disabilities there is an increasing need for quality sign language interpreting It is in education however that the need is most pressing particularly because more than 75% of deaf students now attend regular schools rather than schools for the deaf where teachers and classmates are unable to sign for themselves In the more than 100 interpreter training programs in the U S alone there are a variety of educational models but little empirical information on how to evaluate them or determine their appropriateness in different interpreting and interpreter education covering what we know what we do not know and what we should know Several volumes have covered interpreting and interpreter education there are even some published dissertations that have included a single research study and a few books have attempted to offer methods for professional interpreters or interpreter educators with nods to existing research This is the first volume that synthesizes existing work and provides a coherent picture of the field as a whole including evaluation of the extent to which current practices are supported by validating research It will be the first comprehensive source suitable as both a reference book and a textbook for interpreter training programs and a variety of courses on bilingual education psycholinguistics and translation and cross linguistic studies Reviewing Research in Special Education Jennifer Doran,Seamus Hegarty,2016-04-08 This innovative collection combines research reviews in special education and an exploration of the findings from these reviews from practitioner and policy maker perspectives It consists of five sets of papers the first of which in each set presents a summary of a conventional research review and the second commonly produced in collaboration with teachers translates the review findings into classroom and policy making implications The first four sets of papers derive from work commissioned by the National Council for Special Education in Ireland They deal with best practice and outcomes in the education of pupils who are deaf visually impaired on the autistic spectrum or have emotional and behavioural difficulties The fifth set is based on a review of explicit memory studies in populations with intellectual disabilities that was submitted to the European Journal of Special Needs Education This direct pairing of technical and practitioner oriented perspectives is relatively unusual and the collection will be a useful addition to the literature for academics practitioners and policy makers This book was originally published as a special issue of the European Journal of Special Needs Education

The Oxford Handbook of Deaf Studies in Language Marc Marschark, Patricia Elizabeth Spencer, 2016 Language development and the challenges it can present for individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing have long been a focus of research theory and practice in D deaf studies and deaf education Over the past 150 years but most especially near the end of the 20th and beginning of the 21st century advances in the acquisition and development of language competencies and skills have been increasing rapidly This volume addresses many of those accomplishments as well as remaining challenges and new questions that have arisen from multiple perspectives theoretical linguistic social emotional neuro biological and socio cultural Contributors comprise an international group of prominent scholars and practitioners from a variety of academic and clinical backgrounds The result is a volume that addresses in detail current knowledge emerging questions and innovative educational practice in a variety of contexts The volume takes on topics such as discussion of the transformation of efforts to identify a best language approach the sign versus speech debate to a stronger focus on individual strengths potentials and choices for selecting and even combining approaches the effects of language on other areas of development as well as effects from other domains on language itself and how neurological socio cognitive and linguistic bases of learning are leading to more specialized approaches to instruction that address the challenges that remain for deaf and hard of hearing individuals This volume both complements and extends The Oxford Handbook of Deaf Studies and Deaf Education Volumes 1 and 2 going further into the unique challenges and demands for deaf or hard of hearing individuals than any other text and providing not only compilations of what is known but setting the course for investigating what is still to be learned
