Essays in Evolution and Genetics in Honor of Theodosius Dobzhansky Max K. Hecht, 2012-12-06 It is not often that one has the opportunity to send a public birthday greeting to a friend and colleague of many years and to congratulate him on having reached the age of reason In fact it happens only once and comes then as a surprise Surely it was only a few years ago that we sat together at an International Genetics Congress in Ithaca and only yesterday that we became members of the same department The eighth floor of Schermerhorn Hall had a north end where the flies were and a south end furnished with mice and in between a seminar room and laboratory There the distances were short and the doors open and the coffee pot busy But it now appears that yesterday has fallen thirty years behind and that we have grown up I find it interesting and appropriate that Dobzhansky's lifetime spans the period of maturation of the fields to which this volume is devoted This is true in a chronological sense for his birth occurred in the same year 1900 in which modern genetics began The rediscovery of Mendel's principles and the interpretation of the nature of heredity and variation to which this event led were necessary prerequisites to the development of evolutionary biology as presented in this collection of essays Essays in Evolution and Genetics in Honor Max K. Lost Sex Isa Schön,Koen Martens,Peter van Dijk,2009-09-22 Sex is the queen of problems in evolutionary biology Generations of researchers have investigated one of the last remaining evolutionary paradoxes why sex exists at all Given that sexual reproduction is costly from an evolutionary point of view one could wonder why not all animals and plants reproduce asexually Dozens of contemporary hypotheses attempt to explain the prevalence of sex and its advantages and predict the early extinction of fully asexual lineages The major theme of this book is what is the fate of animal and plant groups in which sex is lost Initial chapters discuss theory behind asexual life what major disadvantages do asexual groups have to face what are the genetic and ecological consequences and what does this theory predict for more applied aspects of asexual life for example in agricultural pests diseases as well as in cultural crops such as grapes Cases studies in many animals focusing on both invertebrates and vertebrates and plants reveal parallel but also singularly novel adaptations to the absence of meiosis and syngamy And last but not least are asexuals really doomed to early extinction or do genuine ancient asexuals exist This book assembles contributions from the most important research groups dealing with asexual evolution in eukaryotes It is a milestone in research on parthenogenesis and will be useful to undergraduate as well as graduate students and to senior researchers in all fields of evolutionary biology as the paradox of sex remains its queen of problems

Breeding Fodder Crops for Marginal Conditions O.A. Rognli,E.T. Solberg,I. Schjelderup,2012-12-06 This book contains papers and posters presented at the 18th Eucarpia Fodder Crops Section Meeting held at Loen Nordfjord Norway in August 1993 In most environments some form of marginal conditions or stress prevails Few crops are being produced under such a wide range of environmental and management stresses as fodder crops

Improved adaptation of fodder crops to marginal conditions is crucial in developing sustainable low input agricultural systems. The book is unique in demonstrating the large diversity both in crops and environmental stresses that confront the forage breeders. Both general and specific aspects of adaptation to marginal growing conditions are presented ranging from problems caused by snow and ice in the Subarctic regions of Europe to the severe drought problems in the Mediterranean regions. For everyone involved in studies of adaptation and breeding of perennial plants for marginal conditions or stress environments. DHHS Publication, 1980 Quantitative and Ecological Aspects of Plant Breeding J. Hill, H.C.

Becker, P.M. Tigerstedt, 2012-12-06. Latest figures suggest that approximately 20% of the world's population of six billion is malnourished because of food shortages and inadequate distribution systems. To make matters worse it is estimated that some 75 billion metric tons of soil are removed annually from the land by wind and soil erosion, much of it from agricultural land which is thereby rendered unsuitable for agricultural purposes. Moreover, out of a total land area under cultivation of 9.6 billion ha, approximately 1.5 x 10⁹ ha, some 12 x 10⁸ ha of arable land are destroyed and abandoned worldwide each year because of unsustainable agricultural practices. Add to this the fact that the world population is increasing at the rate of a quarter of a million per day and the enormity of the task ahead becomes apparent. To quote the eminent wheat breeder E. R. Sears: "It seems clear that plant geneticists can look forward to an expanded role in the 21st century particularly in relation to plant improvement. The success of these efforts may go a long way towards determining whether the world's increasing billions of humans will be adequately fed. Food for an ever increasing population will have to be produced not only from an ever diminishing but from what will become an ever deteriorating land resource unless justifiable environmental concerns are taken into account."
