Magic Nevil Maskelyne,David Devant,1911 Essence of Magic Lj Rivers,2019-10-26 What would you pay for a taste of magic My name is Ruby Guinevere Morgan I'm half Fay with healing powers and the ability to throw the occasional force field When I left my home town to study journalism I made a promise to my mum to stay hidden from the Harvesters hunting for magical blood like mine My first week at university and I'm already about to break my promise See I tend to poke my nose into places where it doesn't belong and I can't look away when the disappearance of a girl on campus is connected to the hottest drug on the market MagX The same drug that killed my dad My search for answers drags my new friends into the fray And someone or something is watching me from the shadows Blood is about to be spilt and it might very well be mine This is Book One in the Ruby Morgan Series Seven Brief Lessons on Magic Paul Tyson,2019-09-18 Is magic real Could anything be real that can't be quantified or scientifically investigated Are qualities like love beauty and goodness really just about hormones and survival Are strangely immaterial things like thought and personhood fully explainable in scientific terms Does nature itself have any intrinsic value mysterious presence or transcendent horizon Once we ask these questions the answer is pretty obvious of course science can't give us a complete picture of reality Science is very good at what it is good at but highly important aspects of human meaning are simply outside of science's knowledge range So how might we better relate scientific facts to qualitative mysteries How might we integrate our powerful factual knowledge with wisdom about the higher meaning of things This book defines magic as the real qualities and mysteries of the world that science just can't grasp It looks at how we came to put magic in the box of subjective make believe It explores how we might get it out of that box and back into our understanding of reality

A Cognitive Theory of Magic Jesper Sørensen, 2007 Magic is a universal phenomenon Everywhere we look people perform ritual actions in which desirable qualities are transferred by means of physical contact and objects or persons are manipulated by things of their likeness In this book Sørensen embraces a cognitive perspective in order to investigate this long established but controversial topic Following a critique of the traditional approaches to magic and basing his claims on classical ethnographic cases the author explains magic's universality by examining a number of recurrent cognitive processes underlying its different manifestations He focuses on how power is infused into the ritual practice how representations of contagion and similarity can be used to connect otherwise distinct objects in order to manipulate one by the other and how the performance of ritual prompts representations of magical actions as effective Bringing these features together the author proposes a cognitive theory of how people can represent magical rituals as purposeful actions and how ritual actions are integrated into more complex representations of events This explanation in turn yields new insights into the constitutive role of magic in the formation of institutionalised religious ritual
