

US v Mousavi

Background Facts

Seyed Mahmood Mousavi faced charges for willfully providing services to Iran, violating the International Economic Emergency Powers Act (IEEPA) and the Iranian Transaction Regulations (ITR). The allegations are based on Mousavi's agreement to provide consulting services to a Kuwaiti company intending to conduct business in Iran.

Legal Questions

The court had to decide whether the evidence of Mousavi entering into an agreement with a Kuwaiti company, with goals for business in Iran, was enough to claim a violation of the ITR. The court also needed to determine how much knowledge was required for a conviction under ITR and see if the evidence supported Mousavi's guilt.

Court's Holding

The Court of Appeals held that the evidence of Mousavi entering into an agreement to provide future services to a Kuwaiti company, with the intention of doing business in Iran, did constitute a violation of the ITR. The court also said that the government only needed to prove that the defendant knew they were acting unlawfully for a conviction.

Reasoning

The court found Mousavi guilty based on his agreement to provide services for a business looking to operate in Iran. They also clarified that to convict someone under these rules, the government needed to show that the person knew they were breaking the law but didn't have to prove that the person knew all the specific details of the law. They took in Mousavi's background as a businessman, his relationship to Iran, and his experience in organizing travel as factors to support that he was aware he violated the law. This case shows how engaging in agreements, without the necessary licenses, can lead to criminal convictions.

Environmental Law and Governance for the Anthropocene Louis Kotzé, 2017-06-15 The era of eco crises signified by the Anthropocene trope is marked by rapidly intensifying levels of complexity and unevenness which collectively present unique regulatory challenges to environmental law and governance This volume sets out to address the currently under theorised legal and consequent governance challenges presented by the emergence of the Anthropocene as a possible new geological epoch While the epoch has yet to be formally confirmed the trope and discourse of the Anthropocene undoubtedly already confront law and governance scholars with a unique challenge concerning the need to question and ultimately re imagine environmental law and governance interventions in the light of a new socio ecological situation the signs of which are increasingly apparent and urgent This volume does not aspire to offer a univocal response to Anthropocene exigencies and phenomena Any such attempt is in any case unlikely to do justice to the multiple implications and characteristics of Anthropocene forebodings What it does is to invite an unrivalled group of leading law and governance scholars to reflect upon the Anthropocene and the implications of its discursive formation in an attempt to trace some initial often radical future facing and imaginative implications for environmental law and governance
