By the Critical Theology Editorial Team

"Which side are you on?" In the wake of an illegal and violent invasion of her home in 1931 by deputies acting in the interests of a coal mining company, Florence Reece, the wife of a Kentucky coal mine strike organizer, penned the words to a song that asks the most important question for Christians today. With its tune taken from a Christian hymn, the song has been sung and rewritten dozens of times in dozens of conflicts. The chorus asks us to choose between the rich and poor, the powerful and the weak, those at the centre and those in the margins. Because the question has never been more urgent, we launch Critical Theology as a renewal of The Ecumenist, a journal that Gregory Baum founded in 1982.

Pope John Paul II was not afraid to take sides. When he visited Canada in the 1980s, he declared, "The needs of the poor take priority over the desires of the rich; the rights of workers over the maximization of profits; the preservation of the environment over uncontrolled industrial expansion; and production to meet social needs over production for military purposes." Similarly, in the face of dangers—long-standing and emerging—to the dignity and safety of human beings, Christians, along with members of the world's religions and all people of good will, need to make a decision. Neutrality, apathy, cynicism, and passivity are not options. Which side are we on?

Critical Theology is our reply to Florence Reece's heartfelt song. In this first issue, we have asked the members of the new editorial team to write a reflection on what critical theology means to them. You will find that, despite a shared commitment to the faith and justice perspective, each editor comes to this project from a different perspective. We welcome that diversity. Critical theology never imagines that it has
