✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Communication in businesses is critical to the success of the firm. Companies that communicate effectively with their employees have more dedicated and motivated staff. Aside from the communication that takes place within businesses, everyone has their unique communication style. Communication patterns can influence how successfully one interacts with everyone, how well they are comprehended, and how effectively they get along. Hence, knowing one's communication style might be a powerful tool for projecting self-confidence and motivating others. As such, this work focuses on the benefits of the communications style assessment and strategies that can be implemented after the test.

The more one comprehends their dominant communication style and the patterns of others, the easier they can connect (Bratu & Cioca, 2018). Finally, the information one needs to convey remains constant regardless of the stakeholder's communication style (Ramli et al., 2018). Thus, the benefit of the self-assessment is that people can adapt their communication style more effectively to understand and present their messages to others.

I have considered a few actions to take as a result of the assessment. As such, I decided to develop strategies for communicating with people whose styles differ from mine. For example, when interacting with action-oriented individuals, I may adjust to this approach by eliminating any unnecessary build-up and backup information and focusing solely on the key activities and one particular piece of advice. Such a strategy would work since Action-oriented persons are not interested in having to choose between several possibilities and want to ensure that things will be done. Next, I decided to practice the strategies I will conceive when interacting with diverse people, especially
