Foothold on a Hillside Charless Caraway, 1986 In a style reminiscent of the master storytellers of yore Charless Caraway recounts the story of his life as a man and a boy on small farms in Saline and Jackson counties particularly around Eldorado Makanda and Etherton Switch He makes no bones about the hardships of those old days first helping his father eke out a living from the land then scrambling for a living as a sharecropper and fruit picker as he scrimped and saved for the day when he and his young wife Bessie Mae Rowan Caraway could buy a piece of land of their own The one room school the general store the trips by wagon over roads that choked you in summer and swallowed you in winter the home that burned all are described in a matter of fact yet moving way Many of the locations buildings and people are represented in equally unromanticized photographs from the family s collection Some of the stories and photos recall the common disasters of the frontier drought flood and the tornado of 1925 It is clear from these stories that each aspect of life exacted a price but the Caraways paid that price without regret and rallied to go on their way Charless and his family and friends fill this book with courage strength and an unshakable faith in the value of human endeavor The Civilian Conservation Corps in Southern Illinois, 1933-1942 Kay Rippelmeyer, 2015-03-03 Drawing on more than thirty years of meticulous research Kay Rippelmeyer details the Depression era history of the simultaneous creation of the Civilian Conservation Corps CCC and the Shawnee National Forest in southern Illinois Through the stories of the men who worked in CCC camps devoted to soil and forest conservation projects she offers a fascinating look into an era of utmost significance to the identity citizens wildlife and natural landscape of the region Rippelmeyer outlines the geologic and geographic history of southern Illinois from Native American uses of the land to the timber industry s decimation of the forest by the 1920s Detailing both the economic hardships and agricultural land abuse plaguing the region during the Depression she reveals how the creation of the CCC under Franklin Delano Roosevelt coincided with the regional campaign for a national forest and how locals first became aware of and involved with the program Rippelmeyer mined CCC camp records from the National Archives newspaper accounts and other correspondence and conducted dozens of oral interviews with workers and their families to re create life in the camps An extensive camp compendium augments the volume featuring numerous photographs camp locations and dates of operation work history and company rosters Satisfying public curiosity and the need for factual information about the camps in southern Illinois this is an essential contribution to regional history and a window to the national impact of the CCC Growing Up in a Land Called Egypt Cleo Caraway, 2009-12-21 In Growing Up in a Land Called Egypt A Southern Illinois Family Biography author Cleo Caraway fondly recalls how she and her siblings came of age on the family farm in the 1930s and 1940s Like many others the Caraways were affected by the economic hardships of the Great Depression but Cleo s parents strived to shelter her and her six siblings from the dire circumstances affecting the nation and their home and allowed them to bask in their idealistic existence Her love for her family clearly shines from every page as she writes of a simpler time before World War II divided the family Caraway revels in the life her family lived on a southern Illinois hilltop in Murphysboro township marveling at the mix of commonplace and adventure she experienced in her childhood She remembers her first day of school walking three miles to the wondrous one room building with her siblings reminisces about strolling through the countryside with her mother investigating the various plants and flowers fruits and nuts and recollects her fascination with the Indian relics she found buried near her home a hobby she shared with her father She also writes of seeing Gone with the Wind on the big screen at the Hippodrome in Murphysboro of learning to sew dresses for her dolls and of idyllic life on the farm milking cows hatching chicks feeding pigs Along with her personal memories Caraway includes interviews with neighbors and many fascinating photographs with detailed captions that make the images come alive A delightful follow up to her father's popular Foothold on a Hillside Memories of a Southern Illinoisan Caraway's book is a pleasant change from the typical accounts of southern Illinois before during and after the Great Depression Instead of hardscrabble grit Growing Up in a Land Called Egypt offers a refreshingly different view of the period and is certain to be embraced by southern Illinois natives as well as anyone interested in the experiences of a rural family that thrived despite the difficult times The author's lighthearted prose self deprecating humor and genuine affection for her family make reading this book a rich and memorable experience
