Featherman, Richard M. Lerner, 2019-05-24 The final volume in this significant series this publication mirrors the broad scientific attention given to ideas and issues associated with the life span perspective constancy and change in human development opportunities for and constraints on plasticity in structure and function across life the potential for intervention across the entire life course and thus for the creation of an applied developmental science individual differences diversity in life paths in contexts or the ecology of human development and in changing relations between people and contexts interconnections and discontinuities across age levels and developmental periods and the importance of integrating biological psychological social cultural and historical levels of organization in order to understand human development Unravelling Migrants as Transnational

Agents of Development Thomas Faist, Nadine Sieveking, 2011 Since the early 2000s there has been an increased interest in international migration as a central mechanism to advance what is called the development potential of international migrants The contributions in this book argue that the current enthusiasm about the migration development nexus should be approached from a perspective that recognizes and critically appraises the emergence of a new agent in development discourse variably called migrants diaspora or transnational community The essays which are the result of intensive student research at Bielefeld University depart from issues raised by the migration development nexus and ask how life worlds and institutions are changing in the face of cross border processes In this way the book is also a contribution to the different understandings of development Series Politik Gemeinschaft und Gesellschaft in einer globalisierten Welt Vol 11

Everything must change Vittorio Bufacchi, 2021-06-10 The philosopher Michel de Montaigne said that facing our mortality is the only way to learn the art of living This book asks what we can learn from COVID 19 both as individuals and collectively as a society Written during the first and second lockdowns Everything must change offers philosophical perspectives on some of the most pressing issues raised by the pandemic It argues that the pandemic is not a misfortune but an injustice that it has exposed our society's inadequate treatment of its most vulnerable members that populist ideologies of post truth are dangerous and potentially disastrous In considering these issues and more the book draws on a diverse range of philosophers from Cicero Hobbes and Arendt to prominent contemporary thinkers At the heart of the book is a simple argument politics can be the difference between life and death With careful reflection we can avoid knee jerk decision making and ensure that the right lessons are learned so that this crisis ultimately changes our lives for the better ushering in a society that is both more compassionate and more just

The ambivalent character of participation intends to provide a look at new initiatives in the various fields of workplace participation. Leading international scholars examine the role of institutional contexts for participation, the development of new forms of interest organisation as well as the relationship between organisational performance, participation practices and quality of working life.
