

How Does Hearing Change with Age?

Childhood

Children generally have good hearing, which helps with their social and linguistic development. However, it's important to avoid loud noises, that can harm developing ears.

Retirement

As we age, changes to the inner ear contribute to hearing loss. This is particularly noticeable at higher frequencies.

Infancy

Babies are not born with perfect hearing. The inner ear of a newborn is full of fluid, and hearing mechanisms take a while to mature - hence they respond better to high-pitched voices.

Early Adulthood

Human hearing peaks between the ages of 18 and 25, at which point hearing ability begins to decline - particularly if commonly exposed to loud noises.

Old Age

In the US, approximately 25% of adults over the age of 60 experience age-related hearing loss*. This usually continues to decline into one's 70s, 80s and 90s.
