Signals and Perception David Roberts, 2002 Signals and Perception provides a coherent survey of our understanding of how we interact with the environment via our senses Offering a unified treatment of the senses hearing and balance vision touch and pain smell and taste and assuming little prior knowledge of the field the text should be useful for students on a wide variety of courses in psychology biology and neuroscience

Neuroscience J. F.

Stein, Catherine Stoodley, 2006-08-25 This engaging book will serve as an introductory text in neuroscience. It conveys important ideas in neuroscience without overburdening the student with unnecessary detail. Drawing from his 35 years of teaching experience of teaching at Oxford University, the author concentrates on concepts and observations that students find difficult, amusing, interesting, or exciting. Starting with a brief history of neuroscience, it covers cellular and biophysical aspects, sensory systems, motor systems, the hypothalamus, the autonomic nervous system, learning and memory, and speech and reading.

Virtual and Adaptive Environments Lawrence J. Hettinger, Michael W. Haas, 2003-06-01 With contributions from a collection of authors consisting of many recognizable experts in the field of virtual and adaptive environments, as well as many up and coming young researchers, this book illustrates the many ways in which psychological science contributes to and benefits from the increased development and application of these nascent systems. Discussing issues from both a user and technology-based standpoint, the volume examines the use of human perception, cognition, and behavior. The book builds a foundation on the assumption that these systems are first and foremost human-centered technologies in that their purpose is to complement and extend human capabilities across a wide variety of domains.
