Measuring Capacity to Care Using Nursing Data Evelyn Hovenga, Cherrie Lowe, 2020-03-13 Measuring Capacity to Care Using Nursing Data presents evidence based solutions regarding the adoption of safe staffing principles and the optimum use of operational data to enable health service delivery strategies that result in improved patient and organizational outcomes Readers will learn how to make better use of informatics to collect share link and process data collected operationally for the purpose of providing real time information to decision makers The book discusses topics such as dynamic health care environments health care operational inefficiencies and costly events how to measure nursing care demand nursing models of care data quality and governance and big data The content of the book is a valuable source for graduate students in informatics nurses nursing managers and several members involved in health care who are interested in learning more about the beneficial use of informatics for improving their services Presents and discusses evidences from real world case studies from multiple countries Provides detailed insights of health system complexity in order to improve decision making Demonstrates the link between nursing data and its use for efficient and effective healthcare service management Discusses several limitations currently experienced and their impact on health service delivery A National Trauma Care System National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on the Health of Select Populations, Board on Health Sciences Policy, Committee on Military Trauma Care's Learning Health System and Its Translation to the Civilian Sector, 2016-09-12 Advances in trauma care have accelerated over the past decade spurred by the significant burden of injury from the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq Between 2005 and 2013 the case fatality rate for United States service members injured in Afghanistan decreased by nearly 50 percent despite an increase in the severity of injury among U S troops during the same period of time But as the war in Afghanistan ends knowledge and advances in trauma care developed by the Department of Defense DoD over the past decade from experiences in Afghanistan and Iraq may be lost This would have implications for the quality of trauma care both within the DoD and in the civilian setting where adoption of military advances in trauma care has become increasingly common and necessary to improve the response to multiple civilian casualty events Intentional steps to codify and harvest the lessons learned within the military's trauma system are needed to ensure a ready military medical force for future combat and to prevent death from survivable injuries in both military and civilian systems This will require partnership across military and civilian sectors and a sustained commitment from trauma system leaders at all levels to assure that the necessary knowledge and tools are not lost A National Trauma Care System defines the components of a learning health system necessary to enable continued improvement in trauma care in both the civilian and the military sectors This report provides recommendations to ensure that lessons learned over the past decade from the military s experiences in Afghanistan and Iraq are sustained and built upon for future combat operations and translated into the U S civilian system
