Cerdeiro, Parisa Kamali, Siddharth Kothari, Mr. Dirk V Muir, 2024-06-21 This paper estimates the costs of de-risking scenarios between China and OECD members at the aggregate and sectoral levels Aggregate large scale de-risking reshoring by increasing reliance on domestic production and friend shoring by reducing imports from specific foreign countries is quantified with the IMF's GIMF model suggesting significant permanent effects on the global economy Returning integration to 2000 levels translates into long term global GDP losses of 4.5 percent under reshoring and as much as 1.8 percent under friend shoring Friend shoring does not necessarily deliver a boon to third countries as trade diversion benefits might be largely offset by contractions in China and OECD members Sectoral de-risking where all trade between rivals is eliminated in specific products is quantified through empirical estimation of the scope for quality downgrading The results demonstrate the potential for significant losses in input quality should there be an escalation in export bans Losses are asymmetric against China in the specific case of semiconductors but can be significant for both sides in other sectors including in critical areas such as environmental goods The American Friend, 1926 The FRIEND® Program for Creating Supportive Peer Networks for Students with Social Challenges, including Autism Holly Sokol, Sheri S. The World at Your Door Tom Phillips, Bob Norsworthy, 1997 Each year more than half a million international students enroll in American universities. These students represent the coming generation of world leaders. Yet few are ever welcomed into an American home and even fewer ever attend a church. Korean International Students and the Making of Racialized Transnational Elites Sung-Choon Park, 2020-01-31 By examining privileged and highly skilled Asian migrants such as international students who acquire legal permanent residency in the United States, this book registers and traces these transnational figures as racialized transnational elites and illuminates the intersectionality and reconfiguration of race, class, ethnicity, and nationality. Using in-depth interviews with Korean international students in New York City and Koreans in South Korea as a case study, this book argues that racialized transnational elites are embedded in racial and ethnic dynamics in the United States as well as in class and nationalist conflicts with non-migrant co-ethnics in the sending country. Sung Choon Park further argues that strategic responses to the local social dynamics shape transnational practices such as diaspora building, transfer of knowledge, conversion of cultural capital, and cross-border communication about race, causing heterogeneous social consequences in both societies. Our Exceptional Friend Emma Shortis, 2021-08-18 In Our Exceptional Friend, Emma Shortis draws on history, current affairs, and questions of morality to mount a compelling and unique case as to why Australia's relationship with the United States needs a serious overhaul. Australians are told that we have two choices in this world: the United States or China. Faced with that choice, Australian governments of all persuasions have always sided with America, even if that means siding with a President like Donald J. Trump. While the election of Joe Biden has led many of us to hope that we might be heading for a calmer, more compassionate world and a reset of Australia and America's special relationship going back to normal, is not only a bad idea, it's a dangerous and immoral one. Our Exceptional Friend challenges the old assumption that we have no option other than to submit to one global power at the expense of another and asks Australians to really examine why it is that we welcome American dominance. In this our 70th year of the Australia-US alliance, historian Emma Shortis argues it's time to take a fresh and unflinching look at our special relationship and examine whose interests it really serves. We don't have to make a binary choice between subservience to an increasingly broken democracy and abandoning the alliance. There are other options. How can we make it better for us and make the world a better place for it? International Perspectives on Diversity in ELT Darío Luis Banegas, Griselda Beacon, Mercedes Pérez Berbain, 2021-07-14 This edited book provides professionals in the field of English Language Teaching (ELT) with a situated and culturally responsive account of diversity and inclusion in English language education from primary to higher education and in a wide range of settings. The volume focuses on three overlapping areas: interculturality, special education needs, and gender. The chapters in each section seek to help readers reflect on the opportunities and challenges of diversity as a step towards inclusive practices and raise awareness of critical topics across the curriculum and beyond by engaging in wider social issues. This book will be of interest to language teachers and teacher trainers as well as scholars working in applied linguistics higher education intercultural studies and related fields My Friend, My Enemy
