The Back-Up Plan Alice Judge-Talbot, 2018-07-05 At 27 years old I found myself with a broken down marriage and two children under two to raise on my own I had no other option than to survive Nah scratch that I needed to thrive But where would I begin I wasn't sure if I knew how to live alone let alone how to boss it solo with a couple of kids in tow It's been a hell of a journey signposted with dating fails money worries and ex husband woes but when was a Back up Plan ever straightforward This book is the one I needed to read in the lonely 3am darkness of an unfixable marriage lying next to a man

I was sure I didn't want to be tied to anyone but whom I was too scared to leave. This book is the one I needed to read when I picked up my first packet of antidepressants and read Elizabeth Wurtzel's Prozac Nation to feel off the cuff and cool but just felt more depressed. This book is the one I needed to read in the infinitely long days that stretched ahead of me alone with two infants, minimal sleep and no hope. This book is the one I needed to read when shamefully I carted my two toddlers to Boots to pick up my very first Morning After Pill after my very first One Night Stand. This book is the one I needed to read when my world was about to fall apart.

Walking Home Ken Greenberg, 2012-08-07 One of the world's foremost urban designers shares his passion and methods for rejuvenating neglected cities and argues passionately for the importance and possibilities of their renewal. From a youth spent in the boroughs of New York City and other great cities of the world to his beginnings as an architect in Toronto, Ken Greenberg has long recognized that cities at their best provide much of what we seek in a place to call home. Community places of culture and business that we can walk to, mass transit and a wealth of amenities that couldn't be supported without a city's density: the mid-century drive to suburbanization deprived us of these inherent advantages of urban living. The realization of this loss in tandem with pressing recent concerns about energy scarcity and global warming has made us see cities with fresh eyes and a growing understanding that they can provide us with an unparalleled measure of sustainability. Ken Greenberg has not only advocated for the renewal of downtown cores; he has for thirty years designed the very means by which that renewal can happen. Walking Home is both Ken's story and a lesson in turning the world's urban spaces back into places that can give us not only a platform to face the challenges of the future but also a place we can call with pride and satisfaction home.

System City, 2013-08-19 A radical shift is taking place in the way that society is thinking about cities: a change from the machine metaphors of the 20th century to mathematical models of the processes of biological and natural systems. From this new perspective, cities are regarded not simply as spatially extended material artefacts but as complex systems that are analogous to living organisms exhibiting many of the same characteristics. There is an emerging view that the design of the thousands of new cities needed for an expanding world population are to be founded on intelligent and inhabited infrastructural systems or flow architectures of urban metabolisms. The physical arrays of the flow architecture of the city are intimately connected to the networks of subsidiary systems that collect and distribute energy, materials and information. They animate the city and should therefore be intimately coupled to the spatial and cultural patterns of life in the city: to the public spaces through which people flow and should unite rather than divide urban morphological and ecological systems.

Featured architects: AMID, Cerro, Buro Happold, Foster Partners, Groundlab and SOM. Contributors include Joan Busquets, Kate Davies and Liam Young, Mehran Gharleghi, Evan Greenberg and George Jeronimidis, Marina Lathouri, Wolf Mangelsdorf, Daniel Segraves, Jack Self, Ricard Sol and Sergi Valverde and Iain Stewart.

Anglo-American Crossroads Mark Clapson, 2012-12-20 The postwar British city was shaped by many international forces during the last century but American influences on British urban research and urban planning have been particularly significant Beginning with debates about reconstruction during the Second World War Anglo American Crossroads explores how Americanisation influenced key approaches to town planning from reconstruction after 1945 to the New Urbanism of the 1990s Clapson pays particular attention to the relationship between urban sociological research and planning issues since the 1950s He also addresses the ways in which American developers and planners of new communities looked to the British new towns and garden city movement for inspiration Using a wide range of sources from American Foundation Archives to town planning materials and urban sociologies Anglo American Crossroads shows that although some things went wrong in translation from the USA to Britain there were also some important successes within a transatlantic dialogue that was more nuanced than a one dimensional process of American hegemony

Future Cities Nick Dunn, Paul Cureton, 2020-12-10 What might our cities look like in ten twenty or fifty years How may future cities face global challenges Imagining the city of the future has long been an inspiration for many architects artists and designers This book examines how cities of the future have been visualised what these projects sought to communicate and what the implications may be for us now It provides a visual history of the future and explores the relationships between different visualisation techniques and ideologies for cities Thinking about what futures are who they are for why they are desirable and how and when they are to be brought into being is central to this book Through visualisation we are able to experiment in ways that would be impractical and potentially hazardous in the real world and this book therefore aims to contribute toward a better understanding of the power and agency of visualisations for future cities In this lavishly illustrated text the authors apply several critical lenses to consider the subject in different ways technological futures social futures and global futures providing a comprehensive survey and analysis of visions for future cities and engaging creatively with how we perceive tomorrow s world and future studies more widely
