Footprints James Ten Eyck, 2022-09-14 Footprints is a collection of poems that were either written or revised recently or recalled from work begun and lost fifty years before Some recall pleasant memories of my beloved Veronica and some her later struggles with ill health She was born and grew up in Dublin and Ireland remained a special place for both of us The DART from Howth to Greystones tunnels under Queen V's crown and pops out for the view above Killiney Bay where the magic face of Ireland is found We met and married in Syracuse Events and places from that time are featured in some of the poems Newtown Plus Five was written shortly after news coverage of the fifth anniversary of the Sandy Hook school massacre An Elegy for One and Many commemorates the life of a friend the victims of the Pittsburgh synagogue rampage who died during the same period of time Many of the poems are written in traditional verse forms and rhyme schemes A number of poems reflect concerns about America the face it presents to the world and the state of its democracy Ode from a Colonial Bowl recounts a family history of its founding Flint where once upon a time America coursed through its leaden arteries to nurse its middle class In Vietnam we've grown old some fifty years removed from when our universe was rolled into a white hot ball to find the common threads we shared in youth to pursue our common legacy American Graffiti asks Can Cicero and Caesar coexist within republican constraint Let Freedom Ring calls upon us to answer the distant bells of freedom pealing in Ukraine The challenge is to understand how both poems can be compatible in our logic

Footprints of the Past Carol Payne Crystian, 2013-11 Footprints of the Past is about a collection of current events The first events are from the past others occurred within my life time I wrote how I was affected emotionally and tried to recapture the moments as they occurred in a piece of poetry If I can feel it in my heart I can write it These pieces I wrote will try to take the reader back to the moments of occurrence and recapture those moments as they were taking place with the poet's poetic view I do think of Foot Prints of the Past as a collection of historical current events

Memories Jon Michael Willey, 2021-02-20 A volume of poetry that spans many eras and does justice to all of them Memories they enter into our daily lives wispy images of our past life They are our recollections of the irretrievable events of yesterdays yester years playing in rewind mode from deep within our psyches stirring our emotions From early childhood through the decades Jon Michael's memories stir recollections of joyous times and no so joyous events as they dance across his heart and onto the page Memories of a Lifetime Barbara
