

14 "Southern Official's Hat" Armchair (Yuhouyi, nanguanmangyi) 18, F-42 南官帽椅

one of a pair
elm with black lacquer
45 in. by 24.5 in. by 27 in., seat height, 18.5 in.
Shanghai Museum

The armchair and the side chair in catalogue entry 13, both of which are from the Shuang Shuang Garden region, display a distinctive local character. Both have curved, slightly thick arms, wide tapered corners and deeply pointed corners. They are made from lacquered elm, have spindle backs, the seat rail and display a subtle elegance.

The side slope of the seat rail and the deeply pointed ends make this chair different from the elm seat "Southern Official's Hat" armchair, which has a removable covering seat rail and rounded ends. There is an absence of curved lines where the seat rail meets the rear sides, but to actually the rail bends down much to give joint with the sides. The strong backrest and the side balance the frame of the chair, round-shouldered. The living corners of the curved spindle between the seat rail and rear sides are connected by the arms, which end in points following down to the ends of the seat rail. Like the rail, the joints extend down to give joint with the curved, rounded front posts, the corners are visible on the upper surface of the arms. There are curved-curved grooved side posts and simple shaped spindles between the arms and the front posts.

The board seat is supported by a curved base with tapered corners. The three legs extend from the seat frame, and the long members of the seat frame support the seat from the sides. The seat curved frame has wide-trimmed edges, high flanges, and a simple pointed central ring with a flower motif. There are simple armrests, each side has a three-piece stretched spine, and there is a one-piece stretched spine between the front posts. The bottom member rail is round and protected by having a removable piece of wood on top of it covered by a strip of bamboo. The bamboo protection is missing on one chair.
