Higher Education Quality Assurance in Sub-Saharan Africa Peter Nicolas Materu, 2007 This report assesses the status and practice of higher education quality assurance in Sub Sahara Africa focusing on degree granting tertiary institutions A main finding is that structured national level quality assurance processes in African higher education are a very recent phenomenon and that most countries face major capacity constraints Only about a third of them have established structured national quality assurance mechanism often only as recently as during the last ten years Activities differ in their scope and rigor ranging from simple licensing of institutions by the minister responsible for higher education to comprehensive system wide program accreditation and ranking of institutions Within institutions of higher learning self assessment and academic audits are gradually being adopted to supplement traditional quality assurance methods However knowledge about and experience with self assessments are limited The main challenges to quality assurance system in Africa are cost and human capacity requirements For countries with large tertiary systems the report recommends institutional rather than program accreditation as a cost effective option However where tertiary systems are small and underdeveloped a less formal self assessment for each institution may be necessary until the capacity could be strengthened to support a more formal nation quality assurance agency in the long run
