

Graham Greene on William Gerhardie:

"I was about to leave school for Oxford when Mr. Gerhardie's first novel, Folly, was published. And it has left an indelible impression. I was leaving Oxford when its successor, The Prophet, appeared. In those of my generation he was the most important new novelist to appear in our young life. We were proud of his early and immediate success, like men who have spotted the right horse, and his critical neglect, not only by the great public but by the academic critics, has always remained a mystery."

The (London) Times on God's Fifth Column:

"God's Fifth Column is history enacted by a motley of brilliant, powerful, and carefully arranged characters... [It] is history, however dramatic. It is so because all the time it does to heights of description the deaths of Tolstoy, Chopin and Paganini, three great artists who supply scenes of their own to the book, the slow descent to the execution of the Tsar and his family, with the way the remarkable approach of both world wars, the journey back to Russia, and the... it is a continuously available, stimulating, and impressive work."
