Internal Revenue Taxation Joint Committee,1945 Getting a Poor Return Robert M. Howard,2010-07-02 Public policy often favors one group over another In the case of tax policy the conventional wisdom has been that the dominant political coalition will offer policies that favor their primary constituents The longstanding belief has been that the disfavored group may always assert their rights in court the expectation being as Justice John Marshall Harlan wrote that all citizens are equal before the law In this revealing and insightful study Robert M Howard demonstrates that long cherished beliefs such as equality before the law are more wishful thinking than reality Courts he argues differ little from national policy makers in their approach to tax policy and tax enforcement Examining the tax litigation process particularly the influence and impact of competing courts Howard discovers that fairness before the law may be a laudable goal but the appointment process ensures that tax policy and tax enforcement rulings by the courts reflect the perspectives of the dominant political coalition
