Economics Of Regional Development And Planning In Third World Countries:

Economics of Regional Development and Planning in Third World Countries Srish Chandra Patnaik,1981 Regional Development Planning and Management of Urbanization United Nations Centre for Human Settlements,1997 Regional Development and Planning for the 21st Century Allen G. Noble, Frank J. Costa, Ashok K. Dutt, Robert B. Kent, 2018-12-20
Published in 1998 Regional Development and Planning for the 21st Century examines a number of related themes including the traditional approach of local and regional planning initiatives developed within the context of national goals the current decline of bi polar political and ideological blocs political decentralization and concurrent economic centralization including the growth of multi national corporations devolution of centralized planning powers to regions and localities and the rise and acceptance of sustainable development concepts The book is divided into five parts addressing 1 adjustments to political economic and social change 2 the problems of urban housing and housing and health 3 adjustments to environmental change development policies and sustainability 4 the problem of rapid urban growth and mega cities 5 adjustments of changing urban networks The contributors are from several countries worldwide and the chapters examine the issues at a global level

Place, Migration and Development in the Third World Lawrence A. Brown, 2002-09-11 Providing a fresh examination of the nature of Third World development the author focuses on the characteristics of particular places and regions and their influences on behaviour This is an important study of the relationship between population movements and regional and national changes The Geography of the Third World Michael Pacione, 2012-08-06 First published in 1988 this reissue presents a comprehensive overview of contemporary developments and research into the geography of the Third World at a time when economies and societies there were changing at a much more rapid rate than their counterparts in the developing world It covers the topic both systematically and by region showing how the unique background of each region affects developments there Urbanisation and Planning in the Third World Robert Potter, 2012-08-06 First published in 1985 this book reconsiders the whole question of urbanisation and planning in the Third World It argues that public involvement which is now an accepted part of Western planning should be used more in Third World cities It shows that many inhabitants of Third World cities are migrants from rural areas and have very definite ideas about what the function of the city should be and what it ought to offer and it goes on to argue that therefore a planning process which involves more public participation would better serve local needs and would do much more to solve problems than the contemporary approach Urban And Regional Analysis For Development Planning Richard Rhoda, 2019-03-20 Dr Rhoda concisely presents the wide range of analytical methods available to urban and regional development planners Focusing on the needs of the practitioner in each chapter he concentrates on a particular analytical issue describing several types of relevant analyses and offering guidelines for selecting appropriate techniques to solve speci Economic Planning and Social Justice in Developing Countries Ozay Mehmet, 2014-05-12 First published in 1978 this book was written at a time when belief was high in Western guided economic development of the emerging countries. The success of Marshall Plan in war torn Europe generated a US led optimism that with generous inflows of aid and technical assistance the Third World could be won over in the Cold War. The author's direct experience as a young academic economist in Cyprus, Malaysia, Uganda and Liberia led him to question this general optimism; the reality on the ground in the developing world did not seem to match Western optimism. Theories and blueprints made in the West did not fit the requirements of developing countries. Higher production and better income distribution were inseparable twin objectives of developing nations. That meant production of a higher national output must at the same time promote social justice. Investment must create adequate jobs so that new entrants into rapidly expanding labor force could be gainfully employed. Yet the dominant Western theories of development at the time, in particular the Trickle Down Theory of Growth First Distribution Later strategy. Similarly, Import Substitution Industrialization theories were emphasized at the expense of export led growth. Dualistic Growth theories preached urban biased anti rural development. This book was written as a rebuttal of such faulty theorizing and misguided professional technical assistance and the book's message is no less valid today than in the 1970s.

Life Space and Economic Space: Third World Planning in Perspective John Friedmann, John Friedmann is internationally known for his pathbreaking work in urban and regional development planning theory. Life Space and Economic Space contains some of his most original and controversial essays on spatial and territorial development in the low income countries of the world. The essays focus on a conflict he considers fundamental to human existence that conflict between life space and economic space. By life space Friedmann means the bounded territories over which we strive to exert some degree of self governance and which constitute the human habitat. By economic space he means the ubiquitous global space of market relations. Friedman demonstrates the implications of his theoretical position in a number of ways: he examines development in Southeast Asia, introduces the notion of world cities and presents a politico territorial model of rural development which he calls agropolitan. The analysis extends in wide ranging fashion from the space of global relations to the most intimate space of the household economy which when linked to other households constitutes the economy of the barrio or neighborhood. In a chapter proposing a dual track model of development he sketches a model of the barrio economy drawn from Latin American experience and based on social mobilization, collective self empowerment and political action. Friedmann perceives a global crisis which he traces to the dissolution of territorial relations. This he believes results from penetration of the global system of markets into the remotest corners of the world, undermining traditional cultures and ways of life. The consequence is incipient breakdown, he asserts, and we need to repoliticize space and subordinate the power of capital to the collective will of people organized to work toward common ends. This deliberately provocative collection of essays includes an autobiographical fragment providing contextual information about the author.
