Aspirations for becoming a doctor are often related to the desire to help others, to make a difference in the world, and to pursue a career that is both challenging and rewarding. These aspirations are often shaped by the influence of family, friends, and the media. The process of becoming a doctor is a long and rigorous one, requiring a great deal of dedication and hard work. The journey begins with the completion of high school, followed by the completion of a four-year undergraduate degree. After graduation, students must take the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT) and apply to medical schools. The medical school curriculum is demanding, covering a wide range of subjects, including basic sciences, clinical medicine, and public health. The final step in the process is the completion of a residency program, which provides hands-on training in a specific medical specialty. The rewards of becoming a doctor are many, including the opportunity to help others, to make a difference in the world, and to pursue a career that is both challenging and rewarding.

These observations indicate that a white-Khazarian model, influenced by eastern Slavic immigrants like the 13th-century Russian prince Rurik, may have been in the area. Subsequent white Slavic tribes lived in the same area, and a number of them, including the Rurik dynasty, were predominant in the area until the 13th century, when the Russians arrived.
