Feeding African Cities:

Feeding African Cities Jane Guyer, 2018-08-06 Originally published in 1987 this book traces the broad outlines of urban food policy drawing attention to the limited knowledge of regional social history Urban food supply systems in Africa have developed very fast in the midst of societies in which food production was not in general oriented to feeding distant populations of specialist consumers Institutional and political links had to be forged between town and country if food supply was to be cheap and predictable This volume explores the political and material dynamics of urban food supply through 4 case studies Kano Yaound Dar es Salaam and Harare Feeding African cities ,1987 Cities Feeding People Axumite G. Egziabher, 1994 Cities Feeding People examines urban agriculture in East Africa and proves that it is a safe clean and secure method to feed the world s struggling urban residents It also collapses the myth that urban agriculture is practiced only by the poor and unemployed Cities Feeding People provides the hard facts needed to convince governments that urban agriculture should have a larger role in feeding the urban population Africa Can Help Feed Africa The World Bank, 2012 The rise in global food prices and the ever growing food import bill have prompted sharp attention on agricultural policies in Africa African policy makers are grappling with what unstable food prices mean for their countries how these price movements will affect their food security situation how the private sector is likely to respond and what governments themselves can do In addition they fear that global warming may significantly change the location of food production within Africa This report discusses how opening up cross border trade will boost the potential for greater food production in Africa and contribute to food security by improving poor people s access to food and by increasing returns to poor farmers for the food they produce The Routledge Handbook on Cities of the Global South Susan Parnell, Sophie Oldfield, 2014-03-26 The renaissance in urban theory draws directly from a fresh focus on the neglected realities of cities beyond the west and embraces the global south as the epicentre of urbanism This Handbook engages the complex ways in which cities of the global south and the global north are rapidly shifting the imperative for multiple genealogies of knowledge production as well as a diversity of empirical entry points to understand contemporary urban dynamics The Handbook works towards a geographical realignment in urban studies bringing into conversation a wide array of cities across the global south the ordinary mega global and peripheral With interdisciplinary contributions from a range of leading international experts it profiles an emergent and geographically diverse body of work The contributions draw on conflicting and divergent debates to open up discussion on the meaning of the city in or of the global south arguments that are fluid and increasingly contested geographically and conceptually It reflects on critical urbanism the macro and micro scale forces that shape cities including ideological demographic and technological shifts and constantly changing global and regional economic dynamics Working with southern reference points the chapters present themes in urban politics identity and environment in ways that re frame our thinking about cities The Handbook engages the twenty first century city through a southern urban lens to stimulate scholarly professional and activist engagements with the city

Urban and Peri-urban Agriculture in Africa David Grossman, Leo M. van den Berg, Hyacinth I. Ajaegbu, 2019-05-20 Published in 1999 this work sets out to assess the potential of urban and peri urban agriculture for generating income and for improving food supply for the growing urban population in Africa It considers both full time small holder farmers and part timers who hold land under various tenurial conditions Since the book is a collection of papers based on field studies it contains a wide range of approaches methods of investigation and scientific findings

The Oxford Handbook of Africa and Economics Célestin Monga, Justin Yifu Lin, 2015-07-02 For a long time economic research on Africa was not seen as a profitable venture intellectually or professionally few researchers in top ranked institutions around the world chose to become experts in the field This was understandable the reputation of Africa centered economic research was not enhanced by the well known limitations of economic data across the continent Moreover development economics itself was not always fashionable and the broader discipline of economics has had its ups and downs and has been undergoing a major identity crisis because it failed to predict the Great Recession Times have changed many leading researchers including a few Nobel laureates have taken the subject of Africa and economics seriously enough to devote their expertise and creativity to it They have been amply rewarded the richness complexities and subtleties of African societies civilizations rationalities and ways of living have helped renew the humanities and the social sciences and economics in particular to the point that the continent has become the next major intellectual frontier to researchers from around the world In collecting some of the most authoritative statements about the science of economics and its concepts in the African context this handbook the first of two volumes opens up the diverse acuity of commentary on exciting topics and in the process challenges and stimulates the quest for knowledge Wide ranging in its scope themes language and approaches this volume explores examines and assesses economic thinking on Africa and Africa's contribution to the discipline The editors bring a set of powerful resources to this endeavor most notably a team of internationally renowned economists whose diverse viewpoints are complemented by the perspectives of philosophers political scientists and anthropologists

Food Systems in Africa Gaëlle Balineau, Arthur Bauer, Martin Kessler, Nicole Madariaga, 2021-02-08 Rapid population growth poorly planned urbanization and evolving agricultural production and distribution practices are changing foodways in African cities and creating challenges Africans are increasingly facing hunger undernutrition and malnutrition Yet change also creates new opportunities The food economy currently is the main source of jobs on the continent promising more employment in the near future in farming food processing and food product distribution These opportunities are undermined however by inefficient links among farmers intermediaries and consumers leading to the loss of one third of all food produced This volume is an in depth analysis of food system shortcomings in three West African cities Abidjan C te d Ivoire Rabat Morocco and Niamey Niger Using the lens of geographical economics and sociology the authors draw on quantitative and qualitative field surveys and case studies to offer insightful analyses of political institutions They show the importance of hard physical infrastructure such as transport storage and wholesale and retail market facilities They also describe the soft infrastructure of institutions that facilitate trade such as interpersonal trust market information systems and business climates The authors find that the vague mandates and limited capacities of national trade and agriculture ministries regional and urban authorities neighborhood councils and market cooperatives often hamper policy interventions This volume comes to a simple conclusion international development policy makers and their financial and technical partners have neglected urban markets for far too long and now is the time to rethink and reinvest in this complex yet crucial subject

Migration, Urbanization, and Development Richard E. Bilborrow, 1998 Internal migration and urbanization are key dimensions of the process of socioeconomic development The unprecedented movement of peoples within the borders of their own countries is one of the greatest transformations witnessed in the 20th century Policy analysts especially those from developing countries where internal migration can be felt at first hand view migration as one of the most important factors affecting the course of development It is within this context that UNFPA convened the Symposium on Internal Migration and Urbanization in Developing Countries in January 1996 in preparation for the United Nations World Conference on Human Settlements in Istanbul in June 1996 The final results of the symposium are found in this book This volume provides a better understanding at global level of internal migration issues of concern to policy analysts

Rural Areas Between Regional Needs and Global Challenges Walter

Leimgruber, Chang-yi David Chang, 2019-01-01 This book provides an up to date account of the many processes shaping and transforming rural space in various parts of the world The various case studies focus on the multi functionality of the rural world and the driving forces behind it The book demonstrates that rural areas are no longer simply characterized by an agricultural economy and instead accommodate multiple complementary activities It also touches upon two major changes that have taken place The first is the process of rurbanization which has led to the clear distinction between town and countryside becoming blurred urban traits have penetrated rural areas and rural traits have invaded towns The second change is that rural areas are increasingly seen as multi functional providers not only of food and other natural resources but also locations for the generation of renewable energy wind farms solar farms biogas and regions for the preservation of biodiversity These transformations have resulted in a new understanding and self image of rural areas and their populations

City of Farmers Donald B. Freeman, 1991-03-01 In an insightful new study Donald Freeman examines the development and significance of urban agriculture in Nairobi Kenya overturning a number of common assumptions about the inhabitants and economy of African cities He addresses the ways in which urban agriculture fits into a broader picture of Kenyan social and economic development and discusses the implications of his findings for development theory in general Freeman begins by exploring the context of urban agriculture tracing its development in the colonial and post colonial city He then provides a detailed description of urban farmers their land use practices and their crops Freeman gathered this rich body of information through on site surveys of 618 small scale cultivators in ten different parts of Nairobi He concludes by considering the implications of the burgeoning practice of urban agriculture for the cultivators themselves for the city and for the developing economy of Kenya Although the empirical work is focused on Nairobi and its informal sector the scope and implications of the study are broader and the conclusions relevant to other parts of the Third World Urban productive activities in the Third World Freeman suggests need redefining to take account of basic food production in the city and its interrelationships with other informal and formal sectors A City of Farmers will interest not only economic geographers and students and scholars of development studies and African history but anyone concerned with economic and social conditions in the Third World Retailing Environments in Developing Countries John Dawson, Allan M Findlay, Ronan
