Critical Childhood Studies and the Practice of Interdisciplinarity Joanne Faulkner, Magdalena Zolkos, 2015-12-14 This book analyzes different figurations of childhood in contemporary culture and politics with a particular focus on interdisciplinary methodologies of critical childhood studies It argues that while the figure of the child has been traditionally located at the peripheries of academic disciplines perhaps most notably in history sociology and literature the proposed critical discussions of the ideological symbolic and affective roles that children play in contemporary societies suggest that they are often the locus of larger societal crises collective psychic tensions and unspoken prohibitions and taboos As such this book brings into focus the prejudices against childhood embedded in our standard approaches to organizing knowledge and asks is there a natural disciplinary home for the study of childhood Or is this field fundamentally interdisciplinary peripheral or problematic to notions of disciplinary identity In this respect does childhood force innovation in thinking about disciplinarity For instance how does the analysis of childhood affect how we think about methodology What role do understandings of childhood play in delimiting how we conceive of our society our future and ourselves How does thinking about childhood affect how we think about culture history and politics This book brings together researchers working broadly in critical child studies but from various disciplines in the humanities and social sciences including philosophy literary studies sociology cultural studies and history in order to stage a conversation between these diverse perspectives on the disciplinary or interdisciplinary character of the child as an object of research Such conversation builds on the assumption that childhood far from being marginal is a topic that is hidden in plain sight That is to say while the child is always a presence in culture history literature and philosophy and is often even a highly charged figure within those fields its operation and effects are rarely theoretically scrutinized but rather are more likely drawn upon surreptitiously for another purpose

Women Interrupting, Disrupting, and Revolutionizing Educational Policy and Practice Whitney Sherman Newcomb, Katherine Cumings Mansfield, 2014-06-01 The idea for this book was born from discussions at several recent academic events including the Women Leading Education WLE International Conference in Volos Greece 2012 and the University Council for Educational Administration UCEA Conference in Pittsburgh Pennsylvania 2011 as well as from informal dialogue amongst ourselves and various colleagues both new and veteran to the field of educational leadership and in particular dedicated to the study of women in leadership At both the WLE Conference and the UCEA Conference we heard frustration from veteran women in the field that the study of women in leadership is stagnant and has not moved forward in several years with scholars new to the field continuing to write and publish work about barriers to aspiring and practicing women leaders the same types of reports that began the formal inquiry into women s lives as leaders back in the 1980s without being able to push forward with new information or ideas for change In essence the concerns and questions that were posed from some veteran women were Why are we continuing to report the same things that we reported 30 years ago Why are we still talking about barriers to women in leadership and Why haven t we moved past gender binaries in regard to leadership ideas and practice Considering these questions some women new to the field countered with their own set of responses and questions that included Is it not significant to report that some women are still experiencing the same types of barriers in leadership that were highlighted 30 years ago Is it accurate to report that all women s voices have now been heard represented and How can we report something different if it hasn t happened The discussions that have ensued between veteran women and those new to the field inspired us to develop a book that situates women in leadership exactly where we are today and reports the status of girls who are positioned to continue the good fight that began many years ago and that both highlights the changes that have occurred and reports any stagnancy that continues to threaten women s positionality in educational leadership literature practice and policy It forefronts the voices of women educational scholars who have and are interrupting disrupting and revolutionizing educational policy and practice Our book reports women s leadership activities and knowledge in both the k 12 and university settings and concludes with chapters ripe with ideas for pushing for change through policy advocacy and activism The final chapter presents themes that emerged from the individual chapters and sets forth an agenda to move forward with the study of women in leadership
