1. What are the central tenets of feminist legal theory? Discuss with specific reference (and try to distinguish between) different schools of theory: liberal feminism, radical feminism, cultural feminism.
 1. Engages concerns of women in the analysis of the law - critiques law's patriarchal assumptions
 2. Sees them as embedded within legal rules, reasoning and practices
 3. Explores how women may be better served by the legal system
 4. Schools of feminist theory
 - a. First wave - liberate women from shackles of male oppression and provide them with equal opportunities and legal protections
 - b. Critical feminism - oppression on basis of gender is a fundamental source of inequality in society - requires social and institutional change
 - i. Women subjugated to reinforce & uphold patriarchal structures that encompass all institutions in society
 - c. Liberal legal theory - treats individuals as equal and avoids coercive boundaries relating to sex
 - d. Positivism - employs methods of neutral observation - reinforces position of men as objective and fails to grapple with subjective gender bias
 - e. Legal rationalism and realism - deductive approaches - neutralise power relations and make law appear objective rather than enforcing patriarchy
 5. Liberal feminism
 - a. Premised on assumption women are similar to men in ability to operate in the public world - primary focus on securing equal opportunity and rights - aims for sex blind or gender neutral laws as adequate - opportunity allocated according to ability etc - formal sexual equality of sorts
 6. Difference/cultural feminism
 - a. Argues women are separate and individualised from men but no less deserving of respect etc - against assimilation of women into patriarchal system
